RUSH BRITISH REPLY

INSIST ON FREEDOM OF SEAS

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 4.—The United States will decline to accept the British endorsement of its armed interference with the freedom of the seas. Administration officials made this very plain today in discussing the text of the three notes from England made public this morning.

Although it was admitted that the documents were couched in most adroit language, and seemed to try to be conciliatory, officials pointed out that there was a significant similarity in the British reply and the contentions set up by Germany in defence of her submarine warfare.

The enemy powers agree in professing the greatest friendship for the United States. They place the entire blame for their action on the "ruthless and flagrant violation of the principles of international law" by their opponents and each, in veiled language, professes an intention of going right ahead with their present methods.

"We are sorry that neutral rights are being violated, but war is war," is the substance of the contention of all of the belligerents in their communications with the United States. As a result officials say the diplomatic course is studded with dangerous rocks that will require the most careful navigation if disaster is not to be encountered.

Changed conditions of warfare, the British notes declare, require a new application of the principles of international law. This sentiment, State Department officials pointed out, has been made very familiar to the United States as a result of the general exchanges with Germany.

In his declaration of position Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Minister, defends the measures taken by his government as reasonable and necessary in themselves. They are merely an adaptation to modern methods of warfare of the old principles of the blockade.

Germany must be overcome, the British declare, "in view of her shocking violation of the recognized rules and principles of civilized warfare," and therefore the methods brought into use are justified.

England flatly rejects the American contention that where a belligerent is so situated that his commerce can pass through adjacent neutral ports as easily as through his own territory his opponent has no right to interfere. The entire British position is summed up, officials say, in the following declaration:

"We are interfering with no goods which we would not be entitled to interfere with by blockade if the geographical position and the conditions of Germany at present were such that her commerce passed through her own ports."

The United States, officials declare, cannot accept any such statement. It has insisted in all of its dealings with Germany that the belligerents cannot change the rules of the game so far as neutrals are concerned.

Man Fatally Hurt in Runaway Steam Roller

A steam roller, running wild down the Dracut street hill in Ashmont, today, crushed Patrick O'Toole, a laborer, against the bay window of the house at No. 66 Dracut street. O'Toole, who was rushed to the City Hospital, is not expected to live.

Gilbert Pelquoin, engineer of the roller, and O'Toole, his helper, were sitting on the roller, eating their noonday lunch. Suddenly the roller, which was at the crest of the hill, started down the incline.

Pelquoin and O'Toole stayed on the roller, trying to bring it to a stop. After plunging down the hill for 200 feet, the roller skidded and crashed over the sidewalk, through a fence and against the bay window of the house at No. 66. O'Toole was thrown off and caught in the wreckage.

Mrs. Catherine Cluff, owner of the house, was sitting in the window, but jumped in time to escape injury. She and members of her family were badly frightened when the machine crashed into the house.

Patrolman George Fenderson, who lives at No. 65 Dracut street, ran out with an axe and chopped O'Toole from the wreckage. The roller was partly turned on its side in a maze of timber.

New York State Has 36,240 Insane

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 4.—There are 36,240 insane persons in the hospitals and institutions over this State, or 355.5 persons out of each 100,000 population, according to figures made public today by Secretary Hugo. The 36,240 include 1,340 patients at the two criminal hospitals, 980 in private institutions, and 33,800 in the fourteen hospitals of the State. The greatest increase is shown in the hospitals for the criminal insane.

ABANDON WARSAW DEFENCE

By International News Service.

BERLIN (by wireless), Aug. 4.—Eight of the outer forts defending Ivangorod, on the Visula River south of Warsaw, have been stormed by Austro-German troops, it was officially announced today.

The Overseas News Agency gave out the following item today:

"A dispatch from The Hague states that the Russian legation there officially announces that the evacuation of Warsaw has been ordered on account of the Russian lack of ammunition."

RUSSIANS ADMIT BIG LOSSES IN POLAND AND GERMAN GAINS

PETROGRAD, Aug. 4.—While the Russian War Office admits gains for the Austro-German forces in Courland and Southern Poland, the situation in the sector of Warsaw is unchanged.

The sledge-hammer blows which Field Marshal von Mackensen and General von Buelow have been delivering have cost the Austro-German forces enormously, their losses being estimated at 10,000 men a day during the recent fighting.

The Austro-German forces on the Narew front, northeast of Warsaw, are now concentrating their efforts to push behind Ostralenka, one of the double purpose of investing the fortress and of cutting the railway line which runs from Ostralenka south to Warsaw and Siedlce, says an official report issued by the Russian War Office.

Hard fighting is in progress between the Austro-German forces of General von Gollwitz and the Russians between the Narew and Ora River, south of Ostralenka.

"Our losses are very heavy," says the official communique.

SAY WALSH IS READY TO RUN

Governor Walsh, returning tomorrow from his western trip, is expected to announce that he will run again.

His return promises the greatest reception ever accorded a returning Chief Executive.

Dispatches from Springfield say that what was considered authoritative information that the Governor will be the Democratic candidate for a third term was received there this morning from the Governor's brother, Major Thomas L. Walsh of Fitchburg, who was in telephonic communication with the local Democratic leaders. This statement is the first approach to a formal announcement and was received with jubilation by Western Massachusetts men.

RECEPTION ALONG LINE.

With big receptions at Pittsfield, Springfield and Worcester, and with a great popular demonstration to greet him at the South Station in Boston, the Governor's Boston friends admitted today that he will undoubtedly feel obliged to respond to the invitation and announce his candidacy for a third term.

Telegrams and telephone messages poured into the Governor's office today from enthusiastic citizens inquiring what time the train would pass through the cities and towns along the Boston & Albany.

This is the Governor's schedule:

Albany, 8:35 a. m.; Pittsfield, 10:35 a. m.; Springfield, 12:15 p. m.; Worcester, 1:47 p. m.; Huntington avenue, 2:51 p. m.; South Station, 2:55.

The Governor will come through to Boston. He first thought of leaving the western train at Worcester and proceeding directly to his home in Clinton, but he decided to keep on to Boston and exchange greetings with the big crowd at the station. His brothers and sister will come in from Clinton to greet him.

The Governor will then motor to the State House, probably through Summer, Washington, Court and Beacon streets.

PLAN FOR BIG CROWD.

Local committees have organized to greet him at Pittsfield, Springfield and Worcester. While no organized effort has been made in Boston, the police have made preparations to handle a big crowd expected at the station.

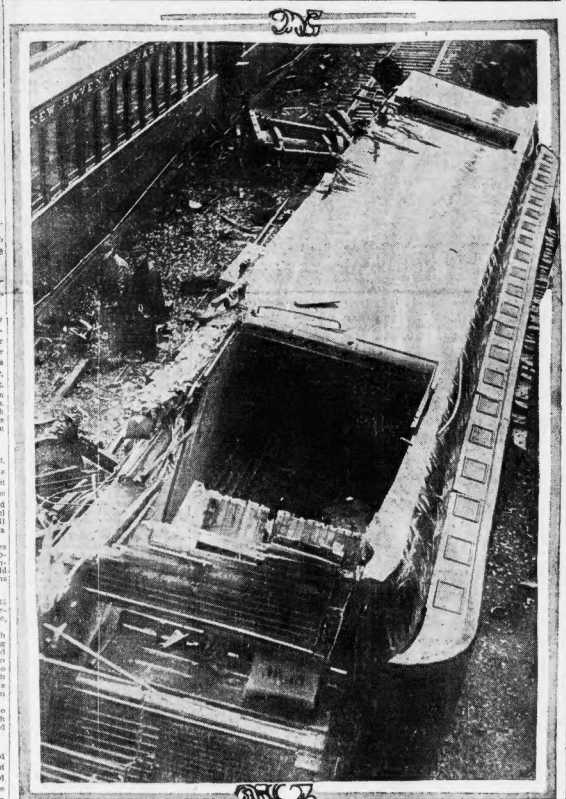
Governor Walsh will be received at Pittsfield with military honors. Brigadier-General Charles H. Cole, head of the Massachusetts militia, and chief of staff to the Governor, left this afternoon for Pittsfield. He was accompanied by Majors William H. Dolan and William J. Keville, Captains Ambrose Clogher, Frank M. Gunby and Charles T. Dubelow and Lieutenant Nathaniel T. Very and his staff.

Governor Walsh has been away thirty days. He went as the head of the Massachusetts State party to the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco. Returning with him will be the twenty members of the State official delegation, and thirteen other Massachusetts people who accompanied the party on the entire trip.

Schooner Wrecked, Two of Crew Lost

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Caught in the gale which lashed the Atlantic coast, the schooner M. V. B. Chase, bound from Cheverie, N. S., for Norfolk, Va., with a cargo of plaster, foundered off Scotland Lightship today with the loss of two men. Captain Tuttle and a seaman were drowned when a lifeboat upset. The other members of the crew were saved by Sandy Hook coast guards.

SCENE OF TRAIN CRASH NEAR ATLANTIC STATION



Scene of New Haven train wreck today in Quincy, near the Atlantic station. Photograph shows an Adams Express Company car lying on its side after the South Shore flyer crashed into the rear of the Cohasset local. Both trains were in-bound from Plymouth.

5 Foreign Steamers Arrive in Boston

Five incoming foreign steamships and two sailings today gave Boston's port officials their busiest day in many months. The incoming steamers were the Scandinavian-American freighter Arkansas from Copenhagen, the Holland-American line freighter Zuiderdijk from Rotterdam, the Sweden-Texas liner Norwega from Christiania, and the British steamers Manx Isles from Cuba and the Prince George from Yarmouth.

The steamers sailing were the Leyland liner Ninian, with horses and other war supplies for Liverpool and Manchester, and the Wilson liner Galileo for Hull.

Red Sox-Indian Games Called Off

Rain that began falling shortly before noon today caused the postponement of this afternoon's double-header between the Red Sox and Cleveland Indians. There will be two games tomorrow, starting at 1.30.

Foot Crushed In Run to Get Ride on Engine

Alfred H. Swanson of No. 124 Sprague street, Readville, a New Haven railroad brakeman, sacrificed one foot and maybe his life today in running for a light engine to get a "lift" from the Dover street freight yard to the South Station.

Swanson's train had just put up in the yard. He ran to get aboard a switch engine which was backing, and allowed too little time to get across the path of the incoming 8.19 train from Scituate.

One foot was crushed so that amputation was necessary when he was brought to the Massachusetts General Hospital. Swanson's head was hurt and he may have other injuries.

Mann of Virginia at Governors' Meeting

Former Governor William Hodges Mann of Virginia has accepted the invitation extended by Governor Walsh to be present at the Governors' conference this month and will read a paper on "Governor's Initiative."

"I am delighted to have your assurance that I will be welcome in Boston and assure you that much pleasure is expected from the trip," says the former Chief Executive of Virginia.

Train Kills Woman at Portsmouth, N. H.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 4.—Mrs. Frances Arches, aged forty-three, residing on McDonough street, was killed in the Boston & Maine Railroad yard at 8 this morning. She was picking up coal.

CRASH ON THE SOUTH SHORE

THE INJURED.

BARTLETT, MRS. MARY, No. 206 Park street, South Weymouth, collapsed, shaken up.

BATCHELDER, W. E., baggagemaster of local train. Cuts about head. Lives in Cohasset.

DURE, MRS. GUSTAVE, head bruised.

GIBBS, E., express messenger on local. Nose and ankle broken. Most seriously injured of all in wreck. Lives at No. 8 Ellet street, Roxbury.

HADLEY, I. P., conductor of local. Badly shaken up.

HOWARD, C. F., right ankle badly bruised.

JACKSON, I. W., badly wrenched back.

LALLOR, FREDERICK R., Ocean street, Squantum. Shaken up.

MAKRIDON, F. T., right wrist badly sprained.

MFARLAND, MRS. SARAH, Abington. Shaken up. Collapsed.

SAFFARANS, MRS. G., Bay street, Squantum. Shaken up.

TERRILL, H. W., right arm badly bruised. Head cut. Lives No. 19 Buckman street, South Weymouth.

Fourteen persons, five of them women, were injured and about 200 others were shaken up severely when one of the New Haven railroad's crack Summer trains, the South Shore express, running in-bound from Plymouth and laden with rich commuters, crashed into the rear end of the in-bound Cohasset local near Atlantic station of the Old Colony division at 11:13 today.

The Cohasset local was on identically the same run that the ill-starred in-bound train from Cohasset was making which was wrecked at South Boston two years ago, with several deaths and many injuries.

The local from Cohasset, delayed longer than usual at Atlantic, started to finish its run to Boston. Ordinarily this train uses the in-bound local track all the way in from Atlantic. But, on account of dirt cars occupying the in-bound track at Savin Hill, the Cohasset train was ordered to switch over to the in-bound express track at a cross-over a few hundred feet on the Boston side of Atlantic station.

This would put the local on the same track along which the fast-flying South Shore express from Plymouth would travel after passing Atlantic. But it is said that the express was reported nine minutes late, so the local was supposed to have time enough.

Something was mixed, however, and the local did not have time enough. Just as the local's last car, an Adams express car, was being hauled over the cross-over from the local to the express track, the flyer rounded a curve and crashed into the train which was in its way.

The shock broke the coupling be-

BRITAIN SUGGESTS ARBITRATION

Secretary of State Lansing stated today that it will take time to study all of the legal data. But he made it very plain by his attitude that the proposed strong protest will now be completed without delay.

The United States will stand squarely on its already announced position of insistance that it has a free and untrammelled right to carry on its commerce with neutral nations. This note will now be completed and made ready for action by President Wilson as soon as he returns from Cornish.

TO DECLINE ARBITRATION.

The British suggestion that where the government thinks its rights have been violated by the British prize courts, the matter be referred to arbitration will also be rejected, at least for the present. The United States will declare that until the great principle is settled all minor issues must be sidetracked.

The notes are four in number. They are:

(1)—The note of Great Britain, dated July 24, which was held up temporarily at the request of Sir Edward Grey, dealing with the general subject of the treatment of American-owned cargoes.

(2)—The supplementary note of Great Britain, dated July 31, which was brought forth by the American caveat refusing to recognize the validity of British prize court proceedings as at present conducted. In this note Great Britain makes her suggestion of appeal to an international tribunal.

(3)—A communication from the State Department to Ambassador Page at London, dated July 15, on the case of the American steamship Neches, instructing him to inform Great Britain that this government does not recognize the legality of the seizure of the cargo, and insisting that it be "expeditiously released."

(4)—The reply of the British government in the Neches case, dated July 28, declaring that so long as Germany continues to destroy all merchant ships and cargoes, belligerent or neutral, that pass through the war zone, with consequent loss of life, it is neither just nor reasonable to press Great Britain to abandon what she understands to be her rights.

TEXT OF BRITISH NOTES SENT TO U. S. DEALING WITH BLOCKADE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—In its general reply to the American representations against the orders-in-council, Sir Edward Grey, the foreign minister, addressing Ambassador Page, begins by expressing the hope that he may be able to convince the administration in Washington, that the measures we have announced are not only reasonable and necessary in themselves, but constitute no more than an adaptation of the old principles of blockade to the peculiar circumstances with which we are confronted.

"I need scarcely dwell," wrote Sir Edward, "on the obligations incumbent upon the allies to take every step in their power to overcome their common enemy in view of the shocking violation of the recognized rules and principles of civilized warfare of which he has been guilty during the present struggle."

CITES LUSITANIA CASE.

Sir Edward refers to alleged atrocities in Belgium, poisoning of wells in German Southwest Africa, use of poisonous gases against the allied troops in Flanders and finally the sinking of the Lusitania, to show "how indispensable it is that we should leave unused no justifiable method of defending ourselves."

"Reaching the question of the allied blockade of neutral ports, the note continues:

"In the various notes which I have received from your excellency the right of a belligerent to establish a blockade of the enemy ports is admitted, a right which has from time to time save in so far as it gives power to a belligerent to cut off the sea-borne exports and imports of his enemy.

"The contention which I understand the United States government now puts forward is that, if a belligerent is so circumstanced that his commerce can pass through adjacent neutral ports as easily as through enemy ports in their own territory, his opponent has no right to interfere and must restrict his measures of blockade in such a manner as to leave such avenues of commerce still open to his adversary. This is a contention which his majesty's government feels unable to accept and which seems to them unreasonable either in point of law or upon principles of international equity.

"They are unable to admit that a belligerent violates any fundamental principles of international law by application of a blockade in such a way as to cut off the enemy's commerce with foreign countries through neutral ports, if the circumstances render such an application of principles of blockade the only means of making it effective.

"The government of the United States, indeed, intimates its readiness to take into account the great changes which have occurred in the conditions and means of naval warfare since the rules hitherto governing legal blockade were formulated, and recognizes that the form of close blockade, with its cordon of ships in the immediate offing of the blockaded ports, is no longer practicable in the face of an enemy possessing the means and opportunity to make an effective defence by the use of submarines, mines and aircraft.

"The only question, which can arise, in regard to the measures reported to for the purpose of carrying out a blockade upon these extended lines is whether to use your excellency's words, they 'conform to the spirit and principles of the essence of the war' and we shall be content to apply this test to the actions of what have taken insofar as it has necessitated interference with neutral commerce."

Sir Edward Grey next refers to the American Civil War blockade of 3,000 miles of coast with a small number of vessels, and recalls how the United States finally took recourse to blockading "neighboring neutral territory which afforded convenient centres from which contraband could be introduced into Confederate territory, and from which blockade running could be facilitated."

"Your Excellency will no doubt remember," wrote Sir Edward, "how, in order to meet this new difficulty the old principles relating to contraband and blockade were developed and the doctrine of continuous voyage was applied and enforced, under which goods destined for the enemy territory were intercepted before they reached the neutral ports from which they were to be re-exported.

"The difficulties which imposed upon the United States the necessity of reshaping some of the old rules are somewhat akin to those with which the allies are now faced in dealing with the trade of their enemy. Adjacent to Germany are various neutral countries which afford her convenient opportunities for carrying on her trade with foreign countries. Her own territories are covered by a network of railways and waterways, which enable her commerce to pass as conveniently through ports in such neutral countries as through her own.

"A blockade limited to enemy ports would leave open routes by which every kind of German commerce could pass almost as easily as through the ports in her own territory.

"Rotterdam is, indeed, the nearest outlet for some of the industrial districts of Germany. It seems accordingly that if it be recognized that a blockade is in certain cases the appropriate method of intercepting the trade of an enemy country, and if the blockade can only become effective by extending it to enemy commerce passing through neutral ports, such an extension is defensible and in accordance with principles which have met with general acceptance."

The note next refers to the case of the British ship Springbok seized by United States cruisers during the Civil War while bound for the British West Indies because her cargo, it was charged, was to be transhipped to the Confederate States.

SUPREME COURT QUOTED.

"The Supreme Court of the United States sustained the seizure against the condemnation of a group of prominent international lawyers, although the United States and British governments took the broader view and recognized the development of the older method of blockade. No protest was made by Great Britain.

"What is really important, in the general review of the adaptation of the old rules should not be made unless they are consistent with the general principles upon which an admitted belligerent right is based.

"It is also essential that all unnecessary injury to neutrals should be avoided. Given these conditions it may be safely affirmed that the steps we are taking to intercept commodities on their way to and from Germany fully comply. We are interfering with no goods to which we should not be entitled to interfere by blockade if the geographical position and the conditions of Germany at present were such that her commerce passed through her own ports. We are taking the blockade care not to interfere with commerce genuinely destined for or proceeding from neutral countries. Furthermore, we have tempered the severity with which our measures might press upon neutrals by not applying the rule which was invariable in the old form of blockade, that ships and goods on their way to or from the blockaded area are liable to condemnation."

THINKS U. S. WRONG.

The note reviews at length the various forms in which blockades have been maintained to show thereby no uniformity of practice in very essential points, and declares:

"The one principle which is fundamental and has obtained universal recognition is that by means of a blockade a belligerent is entitled to cut off by effective means the sea-borne commerce of his enemy."

Consequently, Sir Edward argues, it is impossible to maintain that the right of a belligerent to intercept the commerce of his enemy can be limited in the way suggested in the American notes on the subject.

"There are many cases," he says, "in which proofs that the goods of enemy property would afford strong evidence that they were of enemy origin or enemy destination, and it is only in such cases that we are detaining them. Where proof of enemy ownership would afford no evidence of such origin or destination, we are not in the practice of detaining the goods."

Sir Edward's note closes with the statement that "figures of recent months show that the increased opportunities afforded by the war for American commerce have more than compensated for the loss of the German and Austrian markets.

We shall continue to apply these measures with every desire to occasion the least possible amount of inconvenience to persons engaged in legitimate commerce."

In the supplemental note in reply to the American caveat giving notice that United States would not recognize the orders-in-council in lieu of international law, Sir Edward Grey writes he does "not understand to what divergence of views as to principles of law applicable in these before the prize court, the government of the United States refer, for the only differences of any importance existing between the two countries as to the principles of law applicable in cases before such courts."

RULES COMPARED.

Sir Edward compares the rules governing British prize courts with the rules applied by American courts, referring especially to the American case of the Amy Warwick before the United States Supreme Court, where it was held that "prize courts are subject in the instructions of their own sovereign. In the absence of such instructions their jurisdiction and rules of decisions are to be ascertained by reference to the known powers of such tribunals and the principles by which they are governed under the public law and the practice of nations. It would appear therefore that the principles applied by the prize courts of the two countries are identical."

The supplemental note then gives a long legal argument to demonstrate the practicability of a prize court being governed by international law and at the same time by municipal law in the form of orders-in-council. It finally comes to the case of the steamer Zamora, in the present war, in which the British court declared:

"The nations of the world need not be apprehensive that orders-in-council will emanate from the government of this country in such violation of the acknowledged laws of nations that it is conceivable that our prize tribunals, holding the law of nations in reverence, would feel called upon to disregard and refuse obedience to the provisions of such orders."

Sir Edward points out that the legality of the orders-in-council or of the measures taken under them have not yet been brought to a decision in a prize court, but reminds the United States that "it is open to any United States citizen whose claim is before the prize court to contend that any order-in-council which may affect his claim is inconsistent with the principles of international law and is therefore not binding upon the court.

SUGGESTS ARBITRATION.

"If the prize court decides to accept his contentions, and if, after such a decision has been upheld on appeal by the judicial committee of His Majesty's Privy Council, the government of the United States consider that there is serious ground for holding that the decision is incorrect and infringes the rights of their citizens, it is open to them to claim that it should be subjected to review by an international tribunal."

The celebrated Matamoras cases of the Civil War then are cited to show that the Supreme Court of the United States held it had the right to reverse the decisions of the prize courts, and "that there was no doubt of the jurisdiction of an international tribunal to review the decisions of the prize courts of the United States, where the parties allegging themselves aggrieved had prosecuted their appeals to the court of last resort."

If the United States should be dissatisfied with decisions of British prize courts as sustained by the Privy Council, the British government is prepared to concert with the United States, "in order to decide upon the best way of applying the principle to the situation which would then have arisen."

To the American note in the case of the steamer Neches, which summarily demanded the expeditious release of the American-owned goods detained under the orders-in-council, "the international validity of which the government of the United States regards as plainly illustrated by the present instance," Great Britain replied that "while these acts of the German government continue (shinning neutral as well as British merchant ships irrespective of destination or origin of cargo and without proper regard for safety of passengers or crews), it seems neither reasonable nor just that His Majesty's government should be pressed to abandon the right claimed in the British note and to allow goods from Germany to pass freely through waters effectively patrolled by British ships of war."

Great Britain offers, in conclusion, to make a special examination in the Neches case if hardship had been inflicted.

The British reply, briefly, is a declination to allow free passage to goods originating in Germany or in a territory under German control. The general cargo of the Neches originated in Belgium.

75 DIE IN FLOOD AT ERIE; STORM WIDESPREAD

The storm which swept over a number of States did damage estimated at $5,000,000 and cost, according to latest reports, between 75 and 100 lives.

While New York city and suburbs and the nearby coast were lashed by a torrential rainfall and a sixty-mile gale, the greatest damage was reported from Erie, Pa. There a cloudburst swept away scores of buildings, wrecked light and power plants, filled the streets with debris and tied up every railway line entering the city. The dead there were estimated at more than seventy-five by the coroner.

This storm covered the Atlantic coast from North Carolina to Southern New England and the Great Lakes region from Erie to Michigan. Heavy damage to crops was reported.

In many parts of Greater New York trolley and L traffic was halted. Many surface cars were stalled by flooded streets in New York, and women were carried through miniature lakes.

Two inches of rain fell in two hours at New Haven.

Miss Katherine Alice Page, daughter of Ambassador and Mrs. Walter Hines Page of New York and London, and Charles Greely Loring of Boston were married today in the Chapel Royal in St. James' Palace, London, where Kings and Queens, Princes and Princesses have wed and prayed for centuries.

This is the only bridal on record in the English Chapel Royal where both bride and bridegroom were Americans. The late Ambassador Whitelaw Reid's daughter, Jean, was married in this chapel to the Hon. John Ward, equerry to the King and brother of Lord Dudley.

The scheme of decorations for today's wedding was simple, only white flowers being used. The bride-elect walked through a bower of flowers to the royal altar.

Although less than 200 guests were listed for this ceremony they comprised a notable array, including members of the English nobility, and of the diplomatic corps and some of the most distinguished Americans in London.

The King and Queen of England sent bridal gifts, and only the decision to attend no social functions during the war prevented the royal attendance, so popular are the American ambassador and his family at the Court of St. James.

The Chapel Royal at King Charles I. attend service at its altar just before he started for the headsman's block in Whitehall. Queen Victoria and Prince Albert were united there. So were their daughter, the Princess Royal, and the Crown Prince of Prussia, later the Emperor Frederick. King George and Queen Mary and other royalty were married in this same chapel.

Bishop Boyd Carpenter officiated, assisted by Canon Edgar Shepard. The ring service of the Church of England was used.

Among the guests were Premier and Mrs. Asquith, Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, practically the whole staff of the Embassy and several foreign ambassadors.

The bride's brother, Frank C. Page, served as best man. The bridesmaids were Miss Katherine Sefton of Auburn, N. Y.; Miss Frances Leggett and Miss Joan Cavendish Bentinck.

The bride's dress was white tulle over crepe de chine and was embroidered with rows of Old Brussels point lace. The veil was of tulle edged with pearl. Mrs. Page wore a dress of sage blue with corded silk.

The register was signed by Premier Asquith, Sir Edward Grey and the Italian and Japanese ambassadors.

Mr. and Mrs. Loring will live in Boston.

A wedding breakfast at the American embassy followed the bridal. There will be a brief honeymoon in England. The couple will spend the Winter at the Loring family residence, No. 8 Otis place.

The bride was graduated from Bryn Mawr in 1913, president of her class. Her father was appointed ambassador while she was in college. From Bryn Mawr she went to London, where she received much attention from titled Englishmen. When the war came she aided her father greatly in attending to bewildered and stranded Americans.

Charles Greely Loring is a son of the late General Charles G. Loring, for twenty-five years director of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. He was graduated from Harvard in 1903 and from Tech three years later. He studied in Paris three years and is now of the firm of Loring & Leland, Boston architects.

TEN SHAKEN UP IN AUTO CRASH; DRIVER HELD

Six men and four girls were severely shaken up in a head-on collision between a limousine automobile and a roadster on Washington street, Quincy Point, on the Quincy side of the Weymouth Fore River bridge at 1:30 a. m. today.

William P. Lally of Roxbury, driver of the roadster, who told the Quincy police he worked for a Boston motor company, was arrested on a charge of operating a car while intoxicated. Later in Quincy District Court he pleaded not guilty and was held in $100 for a continued hearing on August 11. He secured bail.

In the limousine, which was going down to Nantasket, were Ralph Bornstein of No. 116 West Canton street, Boston, chauffeur; Dr. Frank Stoll of No. 39 Huntington avenue, Back Bay, with office at No. 55 Temple street; David Bennett of No. 43 Tremont street; Harry Superrior of No. 611 Washington street; Miss Alice Abrams of No. 611 Washington street; Miss Lillian Goldstein of No. 613 Tremont street; Miss C. Penny of No. 1429 Beacon street, Brookline, and Miss S. Marks of Winchester street, Brookline.

In the roadster with Chauffeur Lally was Leon McCullis of No. 37 Concord street, Boston. He said he was asleep when the crash came and knew nothing of the circumstances.

The Quincy police report that Lally, driver of the roadster, was coming up from Nantasket on the left-hand side of the road, while the limousine was travelling in the right-hand rails of the double trolley track, on the proper side of the road.

The machines met with a crash that roused the neighborhood. Screams of the girls followed the smash.

Bridgetender Harry Pray was awakened and telephoned the Quincy police. The police motor ambulance was sent to the scene.

Patrolman Phillips, who came on the ambulance, arrested Chauffeur Lally and also took McCullis, the second man in the roadster, to the police station. Lally was locked up. McCullis was questioned, then released.

The New Eight-Cylinder Cadillac Has Arrived

THE new Eight-Cylinder Cadillac is ushered in on the heels of the most impressive success ever recorded in the motor car industry.

It follows a car which has entrenched itself in a positive position of pre-eminence.

The whole country now knows that the number of cars which are even candidates for comparison with the Cadillac has been narrowed down until they can be counted on the fingers of one hand.

The country no longer asks if the Cadillac is as fine a car as some other; but inquires, instead, what other cars compare with the Cadillac—and how.

If public opinion could be translated into a few simple words, it would doubtless result in the statement that there never has been a motor car equal to the Cadillac Eight—either in performance or in stability.

It is this kind of a car—this one example of V-type efficiency, demonstrated by a year's experience—which the new Cadillac succeeds.

It succeeds a car which many thousands of people believe to have been the best car which the world had yet produced.

The new Cadillac is the fruit of experience, acquired in the building of 13,000 V-type eights, and of their service in the hands of 13,000 users.

We believe that in this new car the V-type engine is developed to a point of excellence which even the most conscientious effort to equal, cannot reach in many and many a day.

A year ago the Cadillac Company was blazing new paths of progress.

It pioneered new principles and new processes, pushing them to a point of certainty before its first V-type engine was marketed.

Nothing can take the place of that hard and painstaking period of invention, selection, rejection, adjustment and adaptation.

As a result, there is but one V-type standard based on extended experience; that is the Cadillac standard.

There is but one V-type criterion base on a demonstrated certainty; that is the Cadillac criterion.

It is obvious, therefore, that the first Cadillac Eight is the source from which V-type development must borrow its inspiration.

And in that fact lies an exceedingly important consideration.

In the pioneering process to which we have referred, the problems solved were peculiar to Cadillac construction.

They referred to that intimate relation between all the parts and all the processes of manufacture which make for a harmonious whole.

The Cadillac transmission and the Cadillac clutch—to cite only two of a number of features—were developed with direct reference to the requirements of the Cadillac V-type engine and the Cadillac car.

Their adoption by other makers may or may not be successful.

It is not the V-type engine, merely as a type, which has proven such a triumphant success, but the Cadillac Eight-Cylinder V-type engine, built into a Cadillac chassis according to Cadillac ideals—and as Cadillac artisans know how to build it.

That is what we meant when we said that nothing can take the place of Cadillac experience in building 13,000 cars.

That is why we do not believe that the equal of this new Cadillac Eight will exist for many a long day.

The first Cadillac Eight furnishes for those who would emulate its excellence the one certain source of V-type information based on extended experience.

And the second Cadillac Eight, with that wonderful experience to build upon, naturally and logically marks an advance over the initial achievement.

There are no doubts or uncertainties about it.

Its advantages and virtues are all clear and positive and plain.

It has taken the one safe V-type criterion and carried it to the highest pitch.

It is twelve months away—13,000 cars away—from the least or last element of experiment.

Its pre-eminence cannot consistently be questioned.

In the face of the widespread adoption of the very principles which produced that pre-eminence, its leadership is not even a subject for discussion.

We believe that the new Eight-Cylinder Cadillac embodies the most practical combination of all 'round efficiency.

No really desirable qualities are sacrificed in order that some less essential—which provide more spectacular, but empty "talking points"—may be exploited.

We believe that it possesses a maximum of the worth-while characteristics which the most exacting motorist wants in his car—power, speed, smoothness, flexibility, ease of operation, dependability and endurance.

We repeat—again—we do not believe the equal of this new Cadillac exists.

And we do not believe that it can or will exist for a long time to come.

FORMER BOSTON SHIP TAKEN BY GERMANS

The American sailing ship, Pass of Balmaha, which was for twenty-five years in the Boston-South American lumber trade and which was seized by a British cruiser last March while carrying cotton to Bremen and was later released, has just been brought into Cuxhaven, Germany, as a German prize under exciting circumstances.

The Overseas News Agency gave out at Berlin today the following item, which was transmitted by wireless to Sayville, L. I.:

"The American ship Pass of Balmaha has arrived at Cuxhaven, having on board one noncommissioned officer of a German submarine boat which had stopped the ship and placed the officer on her as a prize crew.

"While the officer was asleep the captain of the Pass of Balmaha changed his course toward the British coast, but when the officer awakened he compelled the captain of the ship to obey his orders and put into Cuxhaven.

"On investigation at Cuxhaven it was discovered that the British prize crew of one officer and four men was on board, hiding below. The bark was bound with cotton for Archangel, Russia. She sailed from New York June 24."

BUILT AT GLASGOW.

Captain Scott was in charge of the Pass of Balmaha when the ship left New York, June 24, for Archangel.

The Pass of Balmaha was built at Glasgow in 1888 by Scott, Duncan & Co. She is of 1,571 tons register. For years she was owned by the Pass of Balmaha Shipping Company. This is a subsidiary of the Export Lumber Company of No. 53 State street, Boston, and Mystic Wharf, Charlestown. Waterman A. Taft of Arlington is president of the Export Lumber Company and William W. Weaver of Somerville is treasurer. The ship was of British registry.

She plied between Boston and Buenos Ayres with lumber cargoes.

Last January or February the ship was sold to the Harris-Irby Cotton Company of New York for $75,000 for the cotton trade. After Congress passed the American shipping registry act the ship was transferred from British to American registry.

Her new owners also owned the ship Evelyn, which was sunk in the early Spring by a mine off the German coast.

WAS TWICE SEIZED.

On March 10 last news was received that the Pass of Balmaha had been seized by a British cruiser and taken to Kirkwall while sailing from New York to Bremen with 6,000 bales of cotton. The Harris-Irby Company had chartered the ship to H. E. Harris of Galveston.

The seizure showed that England was putting into force an embargo upon American cotton shipped to Germany.

The ship was released from Kirkwall, however, and resumed its transatlantic traffic. It sailed, according to the Berlin dispatches, from New York on June 24 with cotton for Archangel, Russia, only to be seized this time by the Germans.

EDIZIONE ITALIANA
BOSTON AMERICAN

VOL. I. BOSTON, 4 AGOSTO, 1915. NO. 27.

10,000 Uccisi Dalle Rocce

Dalle lettere che gli ufficiali italiani mandano al loro amici si rivela che le perdite austriache sono state gravissime, specialmente perle immense rocce che gli Italiani hanno fatto rotolare giu' contro i nemicihi che scelgono le loro positioni sulle falde dei monti. Pare che un 10.000 austriaci siano stati uccisi cosi. 2500 austriaci furono trovati schiacciati in un stretta di trincee, sotto le rocce che erano state rotolate dall' alto.

POSSONO RITARDARE MA NON VINCERLA.

Gli Austriaci ora ammettono che, mentre essi possono ritardare l'avanata italiana, non possono assolutamente vincerla. Dacche' la guerra si inizio', gli Italiani non hanno perduto un passo del terreno conquistato dal Trentino al Mare. Gli Austriaci, sempre, dopo Roma, 3 Agosto—La battaglia sulla linea dell' Isonzo continua metodicamente e con successo per gli Italiani, i quali gradualmente e giornalmente guadagnano terreno e catturano numerosi prigionieri. I ripetuti contro-attacchi Austriaci sono stati respinti con gravi perdite.

Gli Austriaci si ritirano dalla loro prima linea di difesa da Travignolo a Avisia. Nel Tirolo gli Italiani premano gli Austriaci attraverso la linea ferroviaria. Nella vallata dei Buma Gali le migliori truppe Austriache furono sconfitte e costrette ad abbandonare i posti che occupavano. Sulle Carnizie, nella regione del Rumo Pelia, gli Italiani han preso possesso di parecchie miglia di linea ferroviaria.

Gli austriaci sono stati fortemente rinforzati per assumere l'offensiva, ma i loro contro-attacchi, oltre ad essere inutili, gli son costati cari. Hanno subito enormi perdite. Ad esempio, in un contro attacco contro monte Sei Busi, fatto da truppe fresche, incluso un reggimento dei Kaiser Jaeger, quest'ultimo fu quasi completamente annientato.

UN REGGIMENTO AMIENTATO.

Il Kaiser Jaeger si incontro' con un reggimento di Bersaglieri ed ebbe l'audacia di gridarere questi ultimi di arrendersi. Immediatamente i Bersaglieri assaltarono all abalonetta gli avversari, nonmini al fuggiarono in una lotta feroce. Quando i Bersaglieri occuparono le posizioni nemiche, ove il reggimento Kaiser stava, esso erano letteralemente coverte di cadaveri nemici: dava l'idea d'un immenso macello. Pochi di quel reggimento sfuggirono alla morte.

I prigionieri Austriaci in Italia sono 17.000, compresi 500 ufficiali, mentre di Italiani soltanto 1000 sono i prigionieri.

Rovereto Pericolante

VERONA, 3 Agosto.—Quantunque un tempo orribile abbia sospeso l'offensive Italiana per quasi tutto il fronte, pure, dalla vallata dell' Adige, dove gli Italiani pressano i nemici verso Trento, giungono notizie che indicano che Rovereto, l'ultimo punto importante prima di Trento, viene investita e con successo.

Rovereto e' a 13 miglia da Trento, e la vallata fra le due citta' non offra degli ostacoli naturali. E' generalmente ritenuto che le batterie d'assedio Italiane siano state montate sui monti attorno a Rovereto e facciano considerevole impressione sulla difesa di detta citta'.

REGINA D'ITALIA E AMOR DI PIGLIA.

Ginevra, 1 Agosto.—La regina d'Italia, figlia del re Nicola di Montenegro, ha presentato presso il ministro degli Esteri di Italia contro il decreto che proibisce l'invio di viveri dall' Italia al Montenegro.

AUSTRIANS LOSE 10,000 KILLED BY ROCKS

By ERNEST SMITH,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

ROME, Aug. 4.—The battle on the Isonzo line is still continuing methodically, steadily and successfully for the Italians, who are gradually gaining ground and daily capturing numerous prisoners. Repeated Austrian counter attacks have been repulsed with heavy losses.

Reports reach here that the Austrians are evacuating their first line of defence in this region from Travignolo to Avisio, in the Tyrol the Italians are forcing the Austrians across the railway. In a strong Italian advance in the Gali River valley the best Tyrolese troops were overcome and several points on the Gail were occupied.

ITALIANS TAKE RAILWAY.

In the Fella River region (Carinthia) the Italians took possession of several miles of the railway.

The Austrians have been strongly reinforced in their efforts to assume the offensive, but their counter-attacks have been at the cost of an enormous loss. An instance of this is seen in the counter-attacks against Monte Sei Busi, delivered by fresh, picked troops, including a regiment of the Kaiser Jaeger, which was practically annihilated.

The Kaiser Jaegers met a regiment of Bersaglieri and shouted to them to surrender. The next moment, the officers say, 1,000 fixed bayonets flashed in a desperate hand-to-hand struggle, and, when finally the Bersaglieri occupied the Austrian positions, the field where the Kaiser Jaegers had stood resembled a scene of immense carnage.

FEW AUSTRIANS ESCAPE.

Few of the Austrians had escaped. Letters from Italian officers on the front to friends in Rome dwell upon the heavy losses to the Austrians caused by the hurling down of heavy rocks into the ravines and valleys where the Austrians had taken up their positions. Some 10,000 men have been killed in this manner, it is declared. In one instance, 2,500 were found in one group of trenches, crushed to death by falling rocks.

Austrian prisoners in Italy now number more than 17,000 including 500 officers, while the Italian prisoners in Austria number less than 1,000 including Red Cross doctors, stretcher bearers and even chaplains.

It is to be adopted tonight at a mass meeting at Covent Garden Opera House at which the chief speakers will be Sir Robert Borden, Premier of Canada, and A. J. Balfour, former Premier of England.

RUSSIANS LOSE TO TURKS IN MOUNTAINS

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 4.—Fighting is in progress between the Turks and Russians upon mountain crests nearly 7,000 feet high in the Trans-Caucasian theatre of operations, says an official statement issued by the Turkish War Office today. The Turks were successful.

The text of the official statement follows:

"Our movements have developed successfully in the Tutach region (on the border of Armenia and Trans-Caucasia). On Sunday we occupied Russian positions ten miles north of Tutach and also drove the Russians from their positions upon the mountain range, 8,900 feet high, Mur-Edshinu basin is in our possession.

FOR SUMMER CATARRH AND HAY FEVER

As there seems to be a regular epidemic of Catarrh and hay fever at the present time the following prescription will undoubtedly be welcomed by many. Go to any good Druggist and get 4 ounces of Parmint (double strength) take this home and add to it ½ pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar, stir until dissolved, take one tablespoonful three times a day. This will effect prompt relief from such distressing symptoms as clogged nostrils catarrhal discharges, head noises, deafness, watering of the eyes, sneezing, sore throat, etc. It is easy to prepare, pleasant to take and seems to bring relief even to chronic sufferers. Every person who suffers from catarrh or hay fever should give it a trial.—Advertisement.

These amazing bargains are not equalled anywhere. In fact, my policy of selling pianos is contrary to all profit-making retailing. Profit, as the piano dealers regard it, is not the essential thing in my operations—quick selling is the basic principle of my business policy—and this quick selling on my part makes it impossible for me to realize anything but a fractional part of the ordinary piano dealer's profit. I depend upon a large volume of sales to make actual expenses. That is why my bargains are amazing.

VILLA ACCUSED OF EXECUTING U.S. AIRMEN

CHICACO, Aug. 4.—An inside story of the murder of Americans in Mexico was told here today when Captain William Mattery, a Chicago aviator, believed dead, reached this city.

Captain Mattery was a member of General Villa's aviation corps. That he is here to tell the story is not due to the courtesy of the general. Mattery escaped from Mexico as a fugitive, with a death sentence on his head.

On July 14, dispatches from Villa's army headquarters announced the death of Captain Mattery, describing how his machine plunged 5,000 feet to earth. Appended was an eulogy of Mattery's courage by Villa himself.

That, Captain Mattery says, is the way Villa has of doing things. First, providing a plausible accident alibi for American consumption, he then lines the Yankees up and executes them. Mattery, however, upset the plan. After the story of his "accidental death" had been given out, and two hours before the time set for his execution he eluded his guards and reached El Paso.

Captain Mattery gives the names of two American aviators, one reported killed, the other "seriously injured" by falls in machines, who, he says, have been executed. They are Michael McGuire, a Chicago aviator, shot by a firing squad near Monterey, May 22, because he demanded his pay and threatened to leave the army if he did not get it.

Of Farnum T. Fish, reported "seriously injured," Captain Mattery says that he suffered the same fate as McGuire, after a quarrel with a Villa general.

MEXICO TO BE GIVEN 60 DAYS TO MAKE PEACE

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—An ultimatum to establish peace in Mexico will be sent to Generals Villa, Carpzi and Carranza as soon as possible after tomorrow's conference between Secretary of State Lansing and the diplomatic representatives of Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Bolivia, Uruguay and Guatemala.

The ultimatum which, it is hoped will end this reign of lawlessness, will be addressed not only to the three factional leaders, but to the people of Mexico. Its terms will be substantially as follows:

First—That peace must be established within sixty days.

Second—If peace should not materialize, the United States, acting with the South and Central American powers, will open up by force and keep open, the line of railway between Mexico City and Vera Cruz.

Third—That the United States and these powers will recognize some individual of the Madero constitutional regime, such as Tagle, Lascurain or some other in the line of succession for provisional president after the death of Madero and his vice-president.

Fourth—That this Provisional President of Mexico will be sustained by the active and moral support of the American powers.

WIFE OF INMAN CONFERS ON CASE

Mrs. George S. Inman, wife of the missing United Fruit Company cashier, went to the court house today and conferred with Acting District Attorney Lavelle.

She will appear before the Suffolk County Grand Jury tomorrow to tell all she knows regarding her husband's alleged thefts of $122,000 and his present whereabouts.

Mrs. Inman has already made restitution of over $10,000 in money, stocks and bonds and has offered to aid the police and District Attorney in every way.

The Grand Jury also desires to question Inman's lawyer, Aaron Lyman, of No. 6 Beacon street. Lyman says he knew where Inman was a few days ago.

John C. Fairchild, stock salesman or W. G. Nickerson & Co., bankers, returned today to his office from York Beach, Me., and denied that he saw Inman on the day Inman disappeared. He also denied he had received any request to come to the District Attorney's office and tell what he knew about Inman.

"I was in New York a week ago Monday when Inman last called at my office," said Fairchild. "I was told about his visit on my return the next day, but as Inman often called to discuss business matters I saw nothing significant in it.

"I know nothing about the Inman case except what I have read in the newspapers. I have known Inman for a number of years in a business way, but was not intimately acquainted with him.

"I returned from York Beach, where I was on a yachting trip, at the request of the firm. I have received no communication from the District Attorney's office asking me to come and tell what I know of Inman. I am not allowed to tell you the nature of Inman's dealings with our firm."

Inman's case was further complicated today by a suit for $1,000 brought against Mrs. Inman by Miss Hilma L. Nelson, the Back Bay modiste who jilted Byron Chandler, the "Millionaire Kid."

Other lawsuits are expected to follow Inman's tangled financial affairs. Miss Nelson, the first to enter civil action, when seen today at her dressmaking parlors, No. 299 Boylston street, said:

"Mrs. Inman was recommended by one of my oldest and most exclusive customers. She ordered several minor gowns and two of choicer type. I made her six all told and have never been reimbursed, although there has been plenty of time to have the bill attended to.

"THE GODDESS"

By GOUVERNEUR MORRIS and CHARLES W. GODDARD

By Gouverneur Morris and Charles W. Goddard

Copyright, 1915, by Star Company.

A MAN brought up on numbered streets and rectangular city blocks has no incentive to develop a bump of locality, and at last Freddie, with cold fear in his heart, admitted to himself that he was hopelessly lost.

I shouldn't have said hopelessly; the mariner has his sextant and compass to guide him across the waters, the woodsman has the sun and the stars and the mossy sides of trees to help him out in intuitive sense of direction, and Freddie the Ferret, feeling in his inside pocket, found to his unmitigated relief that he had his pack of cards.

Forthwith he made Celestia sit down, and he knelt, and having shuffled his greasy and shabby deck, he dealt thirteen cards face down in a very accurate circle. Then one by one, a look of faith-expectancy on his face, he turned them over.

Twelve of the cards he then gathered up and put with the pack. The thirteenth was the ace of hearts.

This Freddie lifted with reverence and great care, so as not to change the direction in which it pointed, until it reached the level of his eye and he could sight along it.

A blasted pine standing alone was the first landmark to which the Goddess of Chance directed Freddie the Ferret.

You may call it what you please. The fact remains that Freddie the Ferret had had a return of his usual luck and had hit upon the general direction of the cave.

From the foot of the blasted pine he selected another landmark and pressed on.

* * * * * * *

At about this time Professor Stillter walked from that sleep in which he had asked this question: "How will I know when it is day?"

He got up and groped about in the hut until he had located the door. He opened this and went out. The door was on the shady side of the hut; no warm rays of the sun fell on the Professor to tell him that it was day.

It was cool as night in the shadow. One hand was touching the hut, he felt his way along the side of it until he had turned the first corner. Here the logs felt warm to the touch, and he knew that day had come. He sat down in the warm sunshine to think out a plan.

Above all things he must guide himself by pure reason and logic. If he yielded to impulse, nothing good would come of it. He mustn't make a false start.

To begin with, what had become of the guides who had lived in the vicinity to keep watch and ward over Celestia and the scout of the cave? Their pay went on; it always would; but Stillter, sure of their good faith, where nothing meant a hounding down with death at the end of it, had not kept close track of them.

Old man Smellsgood, the Indian, probably still hunted and fished in the neighborhood. Or, if all these had gone, others perhaps had settled in the houses which they had built.

It was far better that Professor Stillter should be found than that he should go through the dangers and agonies of seeking. Under ordinary circumstances he knew the region like the palm of his hand. The cave itself he could find his way about in as easily as in his own house.

But knowing things when you see them is very different from knowing them when you can't see them and can only touch them. What is merely a depression by day is an abyss by night.

In wooded countries there is nothing better than a fire to attract attention. If any lonely or hungry person is in sight of that fire, that person will go to it, across lakes and mountains if necessary.

Professor Stillter had matches. He might or might not be able to find the materials for a fire in the neighborhood of the hut. He wished to make a big smoke and one which would endure a long time.

After half an hour's work, never losing touch with the hut, Professor Stillter had collected sufficient inflammable material to soft boil an egg. This would never do, and he was wasting time.

Freddie deals out the cards in a superstitious effort to learn what to do

He was tormented by that feeling which perhaps gave rise to the adage the "more haste the less speed." Time was vitally important, he had to do things quickly and he couldn't. He stood against each of the four walls of the hut in succession and shouted for help a few times at the top of his lungs. But, as he expected, nothing came of them.

"Well," he thought, "I'll have to burn my shelter. I will make just the big smoke I need. And I shan't be much the worse off. It won't look like a camp fire, but, like the beginning of a forest fire. It ought to bring a watchman.

The logs of which the hut was built were thoroughly seasoned and full of pitch. By the aid of a heap of old, dried-out balsam which had served him for a pillow during the night, Professor Stillter succeeded in setting it on fire. His ears told him that the fire was going to be a success, and presently, too, the heat that began to emanate from it.

He crawled to a little distance and sat down with his back to the fire. It wasn't likely that anyone would come in less than an hour; it might be many hours before any one came. But he was very sure than his fire would bring some one eventually.

Sitting and waiting, now making attempts to calculate the passage of time, and failing signally, now thinking unhappy thoughts, and now vengeful passionate thoughts, he sat on for eternities of time.

He contrasted what might have been with what was. By now Celestia should have been his, linked to him by indissoluble bonds. Perhaps now, he thought, she would love me. He would have kept her in the cave for a while, and then he would have sneaked her, feasting his eyes on her beauty, to some far country, where her face and voice were not so well known. There he would marry her legitimately, and by him she could have many wonderful and beautiful sons and daughters.

That was what might have been. Instead, behold him, sitting in pitch darkness, his shelter burning behind him as a call for that help which might never come. How long, oh Lord, how long.

Suddenly through his right hand, which rested on the ground, there shot a sharp stab of pain. He jerked his hand upward with an oath. It flashed through his mind that he had been stung by a ground hornet. As a matter of fact, a little creeping tongue of flame had burnt him.

Professor Stillter's fire was spreading. Crevices in the rock in which were lichens and dried mosses carried little torches hither and thither, torches that were only too eager to find and set fire to something worth while.

The main fire made such a crackling and roaring now that Professor Stillter had not heard the lesser sounds which it made in spreading. It was some moments before he realized that he had not been stung, but burnt. It was a smell of burning cloth that made this clear to him. The Professor's coat had caught fire. He moved further away until there seemed to be nothing about him but unburnable rock. He found the place in his coat which was burning and managed to spit upon it till it was out.

Parents and the Child

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water.

Copyright, 1915, Star Company.

"SHOULD parents encourage or curb a child's ambition?"

An AMERICAN reader has written this question. It is not an easy one to answer. Much may depend upon what the ambition is. We remember the various ambitions of our childhood. They were wonderful. I fancy there are few small boys who have not determined at some stage of their early career to be engine drivers. Many of them at one time or another have planned to become soldiers.

Parents have no need to curb such ambitions. As years pass, wild fancies are replaced by dreams of other kinds.

"I hate to see my boy making a fool of himself," complained one father. "He is planning a career that is absolutely impracticable. His every thought and effort tend in the direction of one idea."

"Is the idea one that interferes with his usefulness?" asked an elderly friend.

"Well, no. I'll tell you what it is. He plans to make enough money in his regular line of work to buy a ranch in the West and settle out there to spend the rest of his days by the time he is forty-five."

"I think it is a mighty good thing," the friend remarked gravely. "Can't you see that everyone will be better with some objective in mind, with some cherished idea for which he works? Let the lad alone."

"It is not unworthy ambitions that I am afraid of!" a certain mother declares. "But I am afraid of losing my child."

She is a widow with one daughter, for whom she has sacrificed much. The mother has always hoped that she and the girl might spend many years together. Now the young woman wants to follow a certain line of work that will put thousands of miles between the parent and herself. She is a loving daughter, yet she insists that she has "a career" before her. The mother will be left at home alone.

"The girl is selfish!" disinterested relatives exclaim. "She owes a duty to her parent. Think what that woman has suffered and renounced for her!"

"But," the girl pleads, "mother may live for years—and how about my career? When she is gone it may be too late for me to take it up. I must live my own life."

"The mother must not be considered in such a matter," said one woman to whom I spoke of this case. "She has had her youth and her life. Would she dwarf her daughter's existence?"

Yes, we echo, and try to keep a note of endness from our voices—it is the rule of the ages!

Stung!

A witty youth clambered on top of a westward-bound bus in Glasgow recently, and when the lady conductor murmured, "Fares, please!" handed her a shilling, and demanded:

"Sweets, please!"

Without hesitation, the fair ticket-puncher selected a slip of pasteboard, clipped it, and handed it to the would-be humorist with seventeen-half-penny change.

"This car goes to Paisley," she remarked, with a grin, "that's seven miles on your journey."

HOW TO BE SLIM

By Winnifred Grace Forrest.

If you are too fat and want to reduce your weight 15 or 20 pounds, don't starve and weaken your system, or think you must always be laughed at as an animated tub of fat, but go to any good druggist and get a box of Oil of Korein tablets, take one after each meal and one before retiring at night.

Weigh yourself once a week and note what a pleasant and reliable method this is for removing superfluous fat from any part of the body.

It costs little, is absolutely harmless and I am sure a whole trial should convince anyone that it is unnecessary to be burdened with even a single pound of unsightly fat.

Crusty Father

Arthur, aged seven, had carefully bitten out all the soft pieces of his slice of toast, neatly piling the crusts on the edge of his plate.

"When I was a little boy," said father reprovingly, "I always ate my crusts."

"Did you like them?" asked Arthur.

"Of course I did!" lied the father glibly.

"Then you may have mine," replied his son graciously.

Their Married Life

Helen Finds a New Maid Waiting for Her;

Copyright, 1915, International News Service.

WARREN left Helen at the subway and took his own way to his office. It was hot and the city seemed doubly stuffy after the idyllic coolness of the country.

She walked along the street and turned into the beckoning coolness of her own apartment. The cool stone and the touch of green were refreshing and the smile of the elevator boy gave her a sense of homecoming that was pleasant. At her own apartment she waited for Nora to answer her ring. She felt fit for nothing but a cool darkened room and an icy drink or some kind. She would have Nora make some grape juice seltzer and then she must see about getting Winifred. It wasn't fair to leave the child with Louise longer than was necessary.

Nora opened the door and smiled a welcome. She followed Helen to her room and waited for her to take off her hat. Winifred ran out to meet her and Helen bent to kiss her tenderly, looking at Nora inquiringly.

"Mrs. Bob Curtis left her this morning, madam. She wanted to go out of town for the day, and told me to tell you that she would telephone you tonight."

"Oh, all right, Nora. I am very glad. It's too hot to do much running around in the sun."

Nora did not go, and Helen, noticing this fact, asked if she had anything more to say.

"Yes, ma'am," said Nora, promptly. "If you wouldn't mind coming out to the kitchen, Mary is there, and you could talk to her."

"Mary?" said Helen, wrinkling her forehead in a vain effort to remember Mary.

"Yes, ma'am," volunteered Nora herself, "the girl I spoke to you about."

The remark smote Helen's consciousness with new force. She remembered all too well the fact pasteboard, clipped it, and handed it to the would-be humorist with seventeen-half-penny change.

"This car goes to Paisley," she remarked, with a grin, "that's seven miles on your journey."

"How old are you, Mary?" she inquired.

"Eighteen, ma'am."

"That's pretty young; have you had any experience?"

Nora interposed suddenly.

"She'll have to be learned to wait, ma'am, I'm afraid," she said apologetically; "she ain't had much practice in that, but otherwise she's a good worker."

Helen reflected that she would prefer to teach a girl to wait on the table properly than to have to coax her away from wrong ways that she had accumulated. But still it was hardly a pleasant prospect, and Warren detested ragged table waiting.

A few more questions were asked and answered satisfactorily and it was finally agreed that Mary was to begin work a week from Monday. Nora was to be married the end of the week and that would leave only a day or so without help. She and Warren could take their meals out and they would be going away for August.

"All right," said Helen finally "I am sure that we can get along together nicely, Mary," she said, pleasantly, and she left the kitchen with Nora beaming all over her kindly countenance and the new maid smiling.

"Did you have a nice time at Auntie's?" she asked as she joined Winifred in the living room.

Winifred responded gravely. "Yes; Uncle Bob took us out in his boat yesterday, and I had candy—three, four pieces." Winifred announced this fact proudly, and Helen could not help smiling.

"Did you, dear? Would you like to be away from mother long?"

"No. But Uncle Bob says a lot to me. He asks me how old I am and if I play with dolls and when I am going to school. Daddy doesn't."

Helen heard this statement with a little fierce pain at her heart. Warren was the reverse of demonstrative with any one, but this plaintively uttered "Daddy doesn't" hurt Helen more than she would have imagined.

She knew for the first time that Winifred missed all the little things that Warren might have done for her—the foolish little tendernesses, the pet endearments. Surely Warren did not realize the enormity of the things that he was omitting from his daily treatment of his little daughter.

Shafts from Life's Rainbow

THE art of conversation consists, first, in having something to say, and then in saying it at the right time and in the fewest and simplest words.

* * *

Every evil to which we do not succumb is a benefactor. As the Sandwich Islander believes that the strength and valor of the enemy he kills passes into himself, so we gain the strength of the temptation we resist.

* * *

Do not judge a man by his failure in life, for many a man fails because he is too honest to succeed. Do not judge a man by his speech, for the parrot talks like a philosopher, and is only an instrument of sound. Do not judge a man by his house, for the lizard and the rat often inhabit the grandest structure.

* * *

Women admire strength without seeking to imitate it; men gentleness without bestowing it in return. Patience is strength; impatience is weakness. To sit quiet, even though what is going on wearies you, is a gain. Rude do not come up in a day and if you walk you may find flowers where only a little while ago you thought it was all barren waste. Strive against the disposition to fly from one place to another.

* * *

The chief preventives of idleness are that the heart be in the work, and that there be thorough preparation made for it. Instead of scolding and threatening, it is far better to supply the lack of knowledge, or skill, or practice, or whatever is needed to insure good and successful work. Let any one once feel the power to accomplish something and he will himself exercise the power.

* * *

No man of good feelings can enjoy the least comfort if he be not conscious of working for, or having honestly come into the possession of, fully as much as he spends. To persist in living beyond our income is to live a life of dishonesty; and to subsist on the industry of relatives, as is sometimes the case with the idle and dissolute, is worse still, for it involves an excessive meanness of spirit and hard-heartedness, thus adding depth to the crime, and will be sure to be visited some day with feelings of anguish and remorse.

He—No; I married one!

Fictionless Fable for the Fair

By ANN LISLE

THERE was once a girl who was very unhappy. Life had hurt her cruelly by showing her the promised land of love and happiness and then taking from her it once the prophet who had led her there and the knowledge of how to find the path—and leaving with her the memory of her one glimpse and all the loveliness that was denied her.

And all she wanted it was impossible for the girl to have. And she could not bring herself to want any of the things that were within her grasp. She could find no measure of happiness in anything that happened to her. Even her great goal of desire was taken from her, none of the little goals of every day mattered to her. All her days were quiet and drab. And the girl found no contentment in the quiet that followed her days of lovely melody.

There was a black spot in the girl's heart, and every day she unlocked the door of her heart and took out the ugly black spot and looked at it, and showed it to other people. And soon she began to feel that in her heart there was nothing but that ugly black spot.

The girl hated love and feared it, because once love had made her suffer so. And when other men came into the girl's world and tried to cheer her or even thought of loving her, she feared and put them away, for she knew how love could deceive.

She remembered all she had suffered as a dreadful warning against ever letting that pain in position where she could again suffer it. She deliberately remembered all she had suffered.

"Love!" she laughed. "That is a forced name for the most despicable selfishness of man."

Soon there was a hard look into her eyes. It was cupidity coming into her soul. She remembered that she was very poor and young, and she wondered if she could not use these things to buy herself a little forgetfulness. So she made herself pretty in a new gown and went down into the city to see whom she might attract by her undoing.

She went into a brightly lighted cafe—and sat waiting for what fate might be going to bring to her. And her heart was reckless and her eyes were black as she thought it.

Suddenly she looked across to a nearby table and there sat the man for love of whom she had shut the sunshine out of her life for two years—and for hate of whom she was going to admit into her life all the blackness of storm. He was young and handsome as she had remembered. He was marvelously groomed and as gayly prosperous as if he had never hurt a woman almost to her undoing.

And he was smiling into the infatuated eyes of another woman. And suddenly the girl who had missed him from her life thought two long years, found that she had missed a phantom of her imagination—not a man.

If she had been debarred from being his wife, the girl knew suddenly that there were still millions of other men in life to give her joy—if only she did not forfeit her right to happiness by being unworthy of it. The girl sensed that the man had made under her unhappy through two long years of suffering—but that she had tended and nourished unhappiness as if it were a flower instead of a weed.

And so she turned and hurried back to her home. And in her garden a man was waiting. She had known him for two long years—but she had never seen him before.

"I knew you would come back," said he. "I wanted you so!"

The girl looked at him gently, "I think we all want what we want. I've wanted to be unhappy for a long time. I want to be happy now."

For suddenly she knew the great MORAL. If one has the desire one arrives where one wishes to go. And the Promised Land is there for the will of pain—and if one guide fails, another will come.

The Reward of Art

"This artist," remarked the teacher at the conclusion of the drawing lesson, "painted many other beautiful pictures, which were hung in the galleries of Paris. Now I want you little boys and girls to write me a composition about this great painter."

One of the boys wrote, "The artist painted many beautiful pictures, for which he was hung on the gallows in Paris."

Makes the Eyes Clear, White and Beautiful

If your eyes ever get bloodshot and yellow you can clear them up in half a minute and make them bright and sparkling by dropping a little Murine in each eye. It's wonderful how quickly this prescription works and how it relieves quickly and surely all pains no cocaine, belladonna or harmful drugs of any kind or boracic acid, and it cannot possibly smart or injure the eyes. This prescription is fine to use before going out in the evening to make the eyes clear and white. Riker-Jaynes and leading druggists everywhere have it put up and ready for use. A great many leading eye specialists endorse and recommend this same prescription and use it in their own practice.—Advertisement.

PLANT JUICE HAS SURELY CURED ME

Statement Made by Mrs. Ella Caugle of 90 Taylor St., Neponset.

A true formula should have three essentials. First, it should give quick relief; second, it should destroy germs of disease, and, third, it should build up new tissues. The first is to inspire the necessary confidence; the latter effect must have in the remedy; second is to completely eliminate the cause of the diseased condition, and the third to build up new tissue to give nature a chance to invigorate every organ of the body. That is what Plant Juice, the new herbal stomach remedy, is doing, being demonstrated every day by the numerous testimonials received from every city and town in which introduced. Since Plant Juice has been introduced in this community of local people have testified to the benefits received.

The following statement from Mrs. Ella Caugle, who has lived at No. 90 Taylor St., Neponset, for eight years, is just a sample of what Plant Juice has done for her. She states:

"For years I have suffered with catarrh of stomach, indigestion, dyspepsia, headaches and dizzy spells, with poor appetite, poor digestion and was very nervous and restless. I had a choking sensation in the throat caused by gas, and my breath was almost taken away by the gas pressing on my heart. My food fermented and I was constipated and bothered most of the time. A friend told me to try one Plant Juice, and I have taken Plant Juice and nothing else for the last two weeks, and now I can say that I am feeling like a new woman, as I have no more headaches or pains, can sleep well at night and know that Plant Juice has cured me."

The Plant Juice Man is at the Liggett Drug Co.'s Store, corner of Washington and Avon Streets, where he is daily meeting the local public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement.

MAYOR ISSUES NEW PAVING ORDER

Another victory was scored for the AMERICAN'S better streets crusade when Mayor Curley today ordered the Public Works Department to repave with wooden blocks Boylston street, from Park square to Boylston place.

The Mayor further ordered that all holes on the surfaces of Court and Cambridge streets be closed at once and coupled this order with an announcement that he expected the Transit Commission to advertise for bids for repaving with granite blocks this long stretch of thoroughfare within a week.

With the completion of the Boylston street repaving, there will be a continuous stretch of wooden-paved or asphalt streets from the Back Bay Fens to Scollay square, a large portion of which has been laid since the AMERICAN'S better-streets efforts were inaugurated.

Accompanying the Mayor's orders on these street betterments were two far-reaching reports from Commissioner of Public Works Murphy, showing the present condition of downtown streets that have been torn up to permit the installation of high-pressure water pipes, and explaining every phase of the better-street problem.

Commissioner Murphy frankly admits, in these reports, that the street department force is made up in part of men so aged or decrepit that they cannot do a good day's work, but holds that, even with this serious handicap, the actual cost to the city for the street work carried on makes a favorable showing for the department.

SOUTH SHORE TRAINS IN CRASH

Many Injured and 200 Others Shaken Up in Accident Near Atlantic.

South Shore Express, Carrying Rich Commuters, Plunges Into Cohasset Local.

tween the express car and the combination baggage and smoker of the Cohasset train. The express car was pushed over on the next track, where it rolled along for fifty feet, bumping over sleepers, tearing up the roadbed and doing other damage. Finally the lone car stopped, rolled off its trucks and over on its side and with a final heave managed to turn turtle, so that it stood practically upside down, with its trucks standing by on the track.

Meanwhile the heavy engine of the South Shore express, backed by the momentum, of six cars, kept on after it had brushed the express car to one side. The engine ploughed into the rear end of the combination baggage and smoker of the Cohasset train. The combination car was running smoker end first, so the baggage compartment stood the damage.

The crash brought help in a hurry. Life-saving energy was shown in several quarters.

William H. O'Brien, station agent at Atlantic, got Miss Walsh, the chief operator at Quincy telephone exchange, on the line, with a call for doctors and ambulances.

Miss Walsh turned all her operators loose on hurry calls for doctors. Many responded. Among the first were Drs. D. A. Bruce, Howard Deal and John F. Ahearn.

PRIEST GIVES AID.

Police Chief Burnell of Quincy had just sent his police ambulance to a Wollaston accident, but the minute the auto was back he hustled it over to the wreck. Meanwhile he sent a squad of men to help.

The Rev. Father J. P. Cuff of the Church of the Sacred Heart at Atlantic was quickly on the scene of the wreck. He helped calm passengers and administered absolution to W. E. Batchelder, the brakeman of the Cohasset train. The seriousness of the brakeman's injuries could not be determined in a moment as in the emergency the priest administered the sacred rite.

Mrs. Daniel O'Meara and her daughter, Dorothy, aged thirteen, who live within twenty feet of the accident, witnessed the wreck. Mrs. O'Meara said:

"I was standing in my kitchen door. I saw the local coming over on the express track. I knew that two trains were due on the express track at about the same time. I then saw a second train, going at a pretty good rate, hit the express car which was the last car of the first train, knocking the express car off the rails. The locomotive of the second train then kept on and telescoped into the baggage smoker car.

"We heard women passengers crying, many of them were screaming. We also heard several babies' voices. Many of the passengers left the trains crossed over the tracks and took the trolley cars on Hancock street for Boston."

MESSAGE TO MOTHER.

Batchelder, injured brakeman, with his head bandaged, sent the following telephone message to his sister, Hazel, who works in Boston:

"Tell you, Hazel" said Batchelder. "I got a little bump a while ago. Little trouble with my head. Tell ma everything is O. K. Tell folks not to worry. Am going to my room now."

The place where the wreck occured is less than one-eighth of a mile on the Boston side of Atlantic station, between that station and Neponset bridge. A viaduct crosses the tracks at that point.

The train from Cohasset came to Atlantic via the East Milton branch, which strikes the main line just outside of Atlantic. The South Shore express arrived at Plymouth at 11:02 and came up the main line by way of Quincy.

The main line and the East Milton branch join into a four-track system from Atlantic to Boston. The South Shore express was using the inbound express track as usual.

It was reported that trouble with a coupling delayed the Cohasset train at Atlantic station, so that it stopped there longer than usual.

LOCAL TRACK BLOCKED

Ordinarily the Cohasset train would use the local or outside right-hand track from Atlantic to Boston. But, according to cash hoard at the wreck, the local track was blocked at Savin Hill by dirt cars which were being unloaded. The Cohasset train, therefore, was being switched to the express track for this run.

The South Shore express was following on the same track, but it is said that the express had been reported nine minutes late.

The combination came just wrong. The express, if it was late, had evidently made up some of its elapsed time. The local had lost a little time at Atlantic. And the Savin Hill dirt cars made it necessary for the late local to switch over in front of the speeding express. That was what one heard around the wreck, but it is not official.

When asked to explain how the accident happened Superintendent of Switching Hobbs of the New Haven, who is in charge of the wrecking operations, said:

"I have not the slightest idea. I have been sending all my energies toward getting the tracks cleared up and starting the traffic through. When that is done we will make a thorough investigation. The train-men are too nervous to question now. Old John (referring to Engineer John Barten of the express) is badly broken up over it."

CAR TELESCOPED.

"We now have tracks Nos. 1 and 3 open and will have another track open in a short time. All outgoing traffic is sent out on No. 1 track and the incoming sent in over No. 3."

The forces with which the express car of the local was hurled from the tracks by the collision was shown by the fact that thick oak pilings driven into the earth twenty feet from the tracks were almost unearthed by the car when it struck them.

The combination baggage and smoker of the Cohasset train was telescoped for about three feet of its rear on baggage end by the engine of the express. The combination car is of wood and splinters flew.

Baggagemaster Earl W. Batchelder of the local was in the thick of the smash. He said, after he had been treated at Atlantic station for injuries:

"I was proceeding about my duties as usual when the crash came. I was lifted into the air, and when I came to I found myself sitting amid a pile of trunks and dressmit cases in the car.

Patrick J. Hannahan, of No. 1529 Dorchester avenue, Dorchester, passenger on the express, said:

"We were coming into Atlantic on the fly when the smash came. I knew there were many passengers in the car, but none was hurt. I hurried out to find out what had happened and see if anyone was hurt."

FIFTEEN GIRLS AID RELIEF.

When the engine of the express pushed into the rear end of the local's baggage car, after side-swiping its express car, it pushed the baggage car, loaded with trunks, far enough toward the rear end of the next car to crush it.

The engine and forward cars of the local were cut loose and sent on to Boston after passengers had been attended to. The engine of the express was found to be damaged that it could not be used. It was hauled in by hand. The combination baggage and smoker were later hauled out of the way.

Miss Mary Sheehan, chief operator at the Dorchester telephone exchange, like Miss Walsh, the Quincy chief operator, sent many doctors to the wreck as soon as she received news over her wire.

Among local priests who responded to the emergency call were Father Lord of Atlantic, Father McGrath of Neponset and Father McCoy of West Quincy.

Miss Eva Miller, niece of Dr. C. H. Miller of Ashmont, was in an auto with her uncle on the Atlantic viaduct when the wreck occurred. They saw the collision. Miss Miller said:

DOCTOR HELPS INJURED.

"We were going from Ashmont to Wollaston and were on the viaduct over the tracks when the wreck occurred. We saw it all. The express car of the train ahead was thrown completely off the track. Then the locomotive ran into the baggage car.

"The doctor and I immediately drove as near as we could, then left the car and went to the wreck to give any help possible. We saw them take Mrs. O. Zolillo, the Adams Express messenger, from his car. He was badly hurt, I thought. The doctor helped to treat him, also Baggagemaster Batchelder, whose head was cut."

In spite of the rain residents of Atlantic, Dorchester and Quincy flocked to the wreck. Those living nearby were anxious to help. In spite of the drenching rain many men and women acted as volunteer helpers, doing anything they could to assist passengers, especially women.

The Boston police have received a telegram from White Rock, Me., asking them to locate relatives of John Fitzgerald, nineteen, who was killed there in an auto accident.

The barber police today recovered the body of a man off Spectacle Island. He was about sixty years old, five feet eight inches tall and sandy complexioned, with gray hair. In a pocket was a Knights of Pythias charm. It is believed the body is that of the man who jumped from the Portland boat Monday.

ARGUE AGAINST TRANSFER OF 'BIG BILL'

At the hearing today in the United States Court before Judge Morton relative to a petition for a habeas corpus writ protesting against the transfer of William J. Kelliher ("Big Bill") from Charlestown prison to the Federal prison at Atlanta, Attorney Harvey L. Pratt argued against the transfer on the ground that Kelliher was committed to Charlestown in 1912 for eighteen years for aiding and abetting George W. Coleman in misappropriating funds of the National City Bank of Cambridge. Mr. Pratt declared that the sentences of the law at that time had settled where Kelliher should be confined.

The federal government also agreed at the time to pay his board, thirty-five cents a day. This has since been raised to sixty cents a day on account of the high cost of living.

This in itself could not be construed into a reason for the transfer of Kelliher, as the sentence pronounced upon Kelliher stated that he should be imprisoned in Charlestown and not elsewhere, said Mr. Pratt.

District Attorney George W. Anderson, in the absence of Attorney Greenough, denied that prisoners were sentenced in all cases to one year's hard labor at Atlanta. He said that unless he was some way to place a limit on the state raising the price of keeping prisoners, such a system might go on indefinitely. He said the federal government must protect its interest, and was doing this in transferring the prisoner to Atlanta.

No case was taken under advisement.

Great Interest in the Latest Cadillac Cars

By J. C. KERRIGON.

The new eight-cylinder Cadillac reached here late yesterday. It immediately went on exhibition at the Cadillac salesrooms on Commonwealth avenue, where it is today drawing no end of attention.

In order that Manager A. L. Dunforth could keep faith with his customers and friends, he found it necessary to go to the additional expense of sending the car sent from Detroit to Boston by express.

The second Cadillac eight, as placed on exhibition today, is in all practical intents, a continuation of the first, and indicates that the Cadillac Company again are leading the van in the motor car industry.

The changes made effect the easy accessibility of the engine, and the general appearance of the car. The engine remains, of course, the 90-degree, eight-cylinder, V type, which the Cadillac made famous last year. The electric motor generator, ignition apparatus and carburetor are so made with relation to the cylinder blocks as to afford easy accessibility to the valves by removal only of the plates which inclose them.

The body is of new design with higher side lines, the new cowl, a new radiator with rounded collar. All alterations add to the distinction of the car's appearance. While the Cadillac of this year possessed rather a striking appearance, the new Cadillac, known as Type 53, is particularly pleasing.

The interest displayed in the car, great though it is, is not surprising in view of the interest that has always been centered in the Cadillac productions.

27 TOURISTS OF AMERICAN VIEW FAIR

By International News Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 4.—Twenty-seven tourists, who are the guests of the Boston AMERICAN on an exposition excursion, were entertained at the Massachusetts building at the exposition grounds.

The Bostonians were delighted with the beautiful exposition and with the cordiality with which they were received in the stately building of the gilded dome.

Members of the party had a rally in the assembly hall of the building and were accorded a hearty reception by former residents of their city.

William Dwyer, assistant manager of the Boston AMERICAN Promotion Bureau, made a brief speech in which he told of the pleasant journey of the party across the continent, and the pleasure of the members in at last arriving at the exposition city. He said that none were disappointed, notwithstanding the extravagant praises disseminating throughout Massachusetts.

Charles O. Power, secretary of the Massachusetts commission of the exposition, and Mrs. Power welcomed the party at the building and Mr. Dwyer escorted the excursionists through the grounds.

After the tour of the exposition as a preliminary view of the Jewel City, the party returned to the Massachusett building where tea was served. More sightseeing will be enjoyed today with members of the California-Massachusetts Society as guides.

FRENCH REPULSE ATTACKS IN ARGONNE

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PARIS, Aug. 4.—The Germans have once again assumed the offensive in the Argonne with a view to cutting the lines of communication leading into Verdun.

The French War Office announces that the Germans in the Argonne have attacked the French positions between Hill No. 213 and Fontaine-Auxcharrons, and also in the region of Marie Therese. These attacks were repulsed.

Violent fights have taken place in the Vosges. Two German counter attacks were delivered against the French positions at Barrenkopf, but they were repulsed. Fighting with grenades on the Linge-Schratzmannele line has resulted in a success for the French.

The text of the official communique follows:

"Nothing of importance was reported from Artois during the night notwithstanding the extravagant praises disseminating throughout Massachusetts.

"In the Argonne the Germans made two attacks on Bagatelle Hill No. 213 and Fontaine-Aux-Charrons, and the other in the region of Marie Therese. Everywhere the attacks were repulsed and our troops threw the enemy back in the trenches.

"At Fleur De Paris and also in the neighborhood of Hauts Chevauchee an incessant fusillade has taken place between ours and the enemy's trenches.

"In the Vosges, hand grenade and petard fighting has continued to our advantage on the Alsatian slopes of Barrenkopf and Linge-Schratzmannele during the night. We repulsed German counter attacks at Barrenkopf."

You wouldn't be happy either!

Suppose, all your life you had cherished a dream, a vision of the future as you wanted it for yourself. And suppose you felt that somewhere the "right man" had exactly the same dream of his future, and you had vowed that you would never marry until that man came and told you his dream.

And then suppose that one day a perfectly nice young man, but one you simply couldn't think of marrying, told you his dream, and lo! it was the dream you'd been waiting for.

Do you wonder that she doesn't look happy?

TED LEWIS WINS KUNTZ HUSTLING IN FAST BOUT

TO LAND PLACE WITH GLOVER IN FANS' TRIP.

Alias A. A. Results.

Ted "Kid" Lewis, England, defeated Mike Glover, South Boston, twelve rounds.

Walter Butler, Revere, defeated Ray Wood, Fall River, eight rounds.

Johnny Emery, Cambridge, defeated Willie Green, South Boston, six rounds.

Johnny Boyle, Lowell, knocked out Billy Corrigan, Cambridge, five rounds.

By JACK CONWAY.

TED "KID" LEWIS, the English boxer, scored with a big bang in his debut in a Boston ring. Jimmy Johnston's star glove wielder clashed with Mike Glover of South Boston in a twelve-round bout at the Atlas A. A. last night. When the contest ended Referee Phil Powers awarded the honors to Lewis. It was a good decision, as Lewis had the better of the going in nine of the twelve rounds. The other three frames were even.

Lewis is a great boxer, as we stated in these columns before. He was on the short end of the betting, which was at 10 to 8. As a short-end proposition he was the best bet of the year, just as we remarked yesterday. He's a fast, shifty youngster, with a left hand as good as that possessed by Freddy Welsh, the world's lightweight champion. He's also got brains and as a result is in a position to make things mighty interesting for the world's leading lightweights and welterweights.

There is but little fear that Lewis won't be pushed to the front very rapidly, as he is under the management of Jimmy Johnston, who has handled many great fighters. It will be remembered that it was Johnston who piloted Jem Driscoll and Owen Moran, two of the greatest English boxers who ever invaded this country.

THE Englishman made a grand showing last night. He moved in and out with wonderful precision and grace. He kept circling the ring at all times. He would jab with his left and occasionally cross his right to Glover's jaw. He also made a few flying trips through the air but when he would come down to the mat his left glove would usually be firmly planted on the South Boston boy's jaw.

Glover was beaten but fought an even better battle than he did against Matt Wells and Jack Britton. It was merely a case of where he was opposed by a real ring wizard.

GLOVER had an advantage in weight. It was announced that Glover scaled at 144½ pounds, while Lewis' weight was given as 142 pounds, the weight the men agreed to make for the match. Lewis also told the writer that Glover stripped before he got on the scales, while Lewis was under 142 with all his clothes on. Lewis did not appear to weigh more than 137 or 138 pounds with his fighting togs aboard. He should not experience much difficulty in reducing to 135 pounds, the poundage at which most of our important lightweight battles are fought.

THERE was very little action in the opening session and when the dear old referee sounded hostilities we even. It was a different story in the second frame when Lewis' speed enabled him to outpoint Glover. In this session he displayed all the speed and skill typical of the English boxers, while he called into play the loop-the-loop punch which was made popular by Freddy Welsh.

The third fourth and fifth rounds also ended with Lewis having the better of the going. In the fourth frame Glover became bewildered as a result of Lewis' rapid attack and slipped to the mat after one of the mix-ups. The sixth session was even, while we handed the honors to the Englishman in the seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth frames. The eleventh round was even, while Lewis finished strong and outpointed Glover in the final skirmish.

Johnny Emery won from Willie Lewis, substituted for "Battling" Carroll, in six rounds, while Johnny Boyle stopped Billy Corrigan in five chapters.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 4.—Sanford Bork, the Indianapolis pitcher, who jumped the American Association this week and joined the Steelers, has been temporarily restrained from playing with the latter club.

PORTLAND, Aug. 4.—Pitcher Rose and Outfielder Rowland of the Columbia (coast) League club, have been signed by Manager Duffy of the Portland New England League club.

Get ready, fans, a new vote standing will be printed in Sunday's AMERICAN and will contain a record of all votes polled (over 2,000) up to and including Series No. 12.

There is no time to lose now, candidates. If you want to be on the AMERICAN'S Special Pullman train when it leaves Boston next October for the city or cities where the World's Championship battles will be fought.

It is not necessary to caution many of the contestants about lagging in their vote-gathering efforts—most of them realize the importance of keeping well up in each standing—but a few of them ARE slowing down in this all-important task, being under the impression that both the Red Sox and Braves MIGHT win their respective league pennants.

Right here, let this be made plain—If the Red Sox and Braves both win, the twenty-five winners will have no regrets, because the AMERICAN can be depended upon to do whatever may seem necessary to make things extremely attractive for them.

So, don't give up the battle now, fans—keep right at it—the contest is more than half over and you won't be disappointed, even if both Boston teams DO win, if you are one of the fortunate twenty-five.

The Courier Editor wants a good photograph of each candidate. Those pictures will be published in the AMERICAN from time to time. It is not promised that each picture will be printed, but as many will be used as space will allow. Photographs sent in will not be returned unless called for.

One of the popular fans striving for a trip to the World's Series games is Charles J. Kuntz. He is employed at the Readville Car Shops and is an active member of Lee Manchester Aerie, No. 1989, Fraternal Order of Eagles.

Lowry Going West After Coast Flyers

Frank Lowry, the well known automobile race starter, who will be in charge of the meeting on the new Narragansett Park Speedway at Providence, on Saturday, September 18, was in Boston today, on his way to California, where he goes to assure the entries of some of the Coast stars.

"The Providence speedway is not only the fastest mile track in the country, but is also the safest," says Mr. Lowry. "The management has offered $10,000 in purses for the entries in the 100-mile race and $1,000 for the starters in the twenty-five-mile free-for-all, as well as $1,000 for the twenty starters in a one-hour motorcycle race.

"The century event is limited to fourteen starters by the rules of the A. A. A. and the piston displacement limit is 450 cubic inches. Entry blanks for both events are out.

Miss Vera Ramsey Enters.

Miss Vera Ramsey of England has entered the Women's National golf championship, which will be played at the Onwentsia Club links, Lake Forest, September 6 to 11. Mrs. Arnold Jackson of Oakley, the present champion, will not defend her title.

Calvin Smith Joins Sox.

WILLARD TELLS HOW HE SHOWED SPORTING MEN HE WASN'T A JOKE

By JESS WILLARD.

(Copyright, 1915, by A. Merritt. All Rights Reserved.)

I WASN'T until a week before my fight with Johnson that people began to think that I had a chance. It was funny to watch the sporting writers change around.

You see, they had started out with the idea that I was a joke. For three years they had scoffed me and guyed me. When I whipped Jack it wasn't because I was any good, but because the other fellow was rotten.

They had it all fixed in their minds that I was a mutt, and when I got my match with the champion all of them let out a howl. It was going to be another Jack match, for Johnson would make a sucker out of me, they said.

As I have said before, ridicule was the hardest thing I had to put up with in my early endeavors to get a fight. Three solid years of it with never a break. I believed in myself and my wife believed in me, and that was all the backing I had.

When I landed in Havana I found the same old feeling about the match. Johnson had been at work for some time and his speed and cleverness had made everybody believe that he would win in jig time.

Johnson thought so himself. Whenever my name was mentioned he would grin until every tooth showed. The first I heard was that Johnson had told a close friend to bet on a knockout inside of ten rounds.

The newspaper bunch came around the minute I got down to work. Nearly all of them had a half-grin on their faces and I knew they were figuring on a funny write-up of the "Human Box Car." I think it was those grins that made me train so hard.

I told my four sparring partners that every bout had to be a stem-winder, for I wanted to show the sport writers that I wasn't such a joke as they thought. And we certainly went at it. Ted O'Rourke, Walter Monahan, Jim Savage and Jack Hemple weren't slouches by any means and our training bouts were as good as many of the battles I saw in Madison Square Garden.

I tried everything I had and it wasn't long before the grin began to come off their faces. I used to hear them talking and Walter Monahan was a great boy to bring me their gossip.

"Say, the big boob's got a real left," said one of them.

"And do you notice the rt hit uppercut?" said another.

In a little while the whole tone of things changed. The newspaper crowd began to watch my work carefully and some of them went so far as to say that I had a chance. I let out a few more links and then they announced that Johnson would have to go some to beat me.

I want to say that when the newspaper boys got the joke idea out of their heads nobody could have been kinder. Many of the veterans gave me some valuable tips on ring generalship and all of them made up for past pushing by good, hearty boosting.

I reckon there never was a champion that had a rockier road to travel than I had. If I had been a sensitive fellow and not so sure of myself I would have quit long before I met Johnson. But out of those years of knocking and goading I have only brought one sore spot.

William Muldoon was guilty of one article that hurt me right down to the gizzard. I still say that his whole attack on me was vicious, unfair and unsportsmanlike.

I don't believe in raking up the past to any great extent, but there's a good lesson in the Muldoon incident. It shows that even the greatest experts can go wrong and that it doesn't pay for any fighter to quit trying just because a big gun tells him that he's going to fail.

After the match had been made with Johnson and just before I went training, Muldoon came out with a long article in the New York American. He was introduced to the readers as "America's foremost physical conditioner," and what he did to one was a plenty.

First of all he said that Sam Langford was the one man in the ring that had a chance to whip Johnson. This, mind you, was written only a month or so after the Boston fight in which Gunboat Smith had walloped the tar out of Langford.

After making it plain that Johnson was afraid of Langford, Muldoon turned on me and tried to prove that I was a boob, a sucker and a joke. Johnson was going to whip me inside of ten rounds, because I had these "disadvantages."

First, I was too large, at least five inches too long or tall. Second, I had twenty-five pounds too much weight, and, third, there was my sad lack of experience in the fighting game.

If I were clumsily proportioned, there might have been something in his criticism of my height. But measurement after measurement has shown that I run true to scale, not being one inch off plumb in any direction.

As for my weight—235 pounds—that is only three pounds to the inch, and I defy anyone to point to an ounce of superfluous flesh on me. There has never been a time in my life when I wasn't as hard as nails and as supple as a catamount.

As for my lack of experience, I had fought thirty battles at the time Muldoon wrote his little piece. Corbett had only had twelve fights when he whipped John L. Sullivan.

John L. Sullivan had only engaged in seven bouts when he won the championship from Paddy Ryan in 1882.

Jim Jeffries had only nine fights to his credit when he whipped Bob Fitzsimmons at Coney Island in 1899, and his whole record only shows twenty-one fights.

Not one of these facts seemed to mean anything to Mr. Muldoon. To judge from his talk I had never been in the ring before, but was just a hayseed jerked out of the short grass country.

His whole article was based on the most absurd ignorance of everything connected with me. As for instance, "The young man will not be at his best, according to the laws of nature, until he is twenty-five or twenty-six years of age."

I was born in 1887, and at the time Mr. Muldoon was uttering his owlish advice I was twenty-eight years old. He didn't even take the trouble to find out my age. But here was the real scream in his article:

He should live out in the open, with regular hours, sensible diet, rum and tobacco not only eliminated from his own existence, but he should be where there is no use of those narcotics in his presence.

It's sometimes mighty hard to distinguish between ignorance and idiocy. For three years the papers had called me "Cowboy Willard," and there wasn't a kid in the country that didn't know I came from the prairie where there isn't anything but "life in the open."

For the first twenty-three years of my life I never knew anything but out of doors. As the son of a widow who was trying to run a farm, I milked and hoed and ploughed. And when I was fifteen I went to work as a horse breaker.

At twenty-one I was a freighter and that means long drives across the prairie and the lifting of big crates and boxes, not to mention heaving wagons out of mudholes every now and then.

And when I took up the prize ring at twenty-three I kept up my outdoor life. Nobody ever saw me hanging around saloons or pool halls. I worked in my room at exercises I had put together and the rest of the time found me hitting it over the hills.

Mr. Muldoon's advice about keeping away from rum and tobacco has just about as much reason to it as his warning to stay out in the open air. If he had taken the trouble to look me up or even to write to me, he could have learned that I never used tobacco or tasted whiskey in all my life.

The fact that I didn't have a drop of poison in my body, and that my strength was open air, hard work strength, was one of the great reasons why I thought that I could whip Johnson. I didn't have to wait for Mr. Muldoon to tell me that tobacco and alcohol were poisons. I have been keeping away from them for twenty-eight years.

And mark this "His bones and tendons are soft; his vital organs are easily affected." If he can find a soft bone or tendon in me he can have it to put in a bottle and keep on the mantlepiece.

As for my vital organs being easily affected, I'll give a thousand dollars to any doctor who can find a weak spot in my heart, lungs, kidneys or stomach. Mr. Muldoon may think that fighting is hard work, but I want to tell him that busting a broncho is a more strenuous physical test than any bout that ever was staged.

I have broken hundreds of horses, riding them until the blood poured from my nose. If I had had any soft bones or weak organs don't you think I would have heard of them?

"His mind is simple," continues Mr. Muldoon. "His power of concentration is easily disturbed. His knowledge of co-ordination and cooperation is sadly neglected."

Which is a polite way of saying that I'm a fool. Well, I don't claim to be a scholar, but I do say this: I have earned my living all my life and I am a husband and the father of four children. I started out with nothing and when I entered the prize ring I had built up a good paying business.

I may have no power of concentration, as he says, but the fact remains that I held to one idea for five long years. I set out to be champion of the world, and I got there. I had no friends, no help of any kind and, on the other hand, I was made to run a bitter gauntlet of ridicule from start to finish.

Does anyone think that I could have stuck at the job if my power of concentration was easily disturbed?

The Muldoon article hurt me at the time and I am still sore, but I reckon my victory over Johnson was the best answer I could have made. It made Mr. Muldoon the laughing stock of the country by showing him up to be the most ignorant, prejudiced man that ever put pen to paper.

Tomorrow Willard will write about the long line of ring champions.

A Woman Going to California Alone or With Children

Every woman, I don't care how competent and independent she is, feels a little more at ease if she can have, if she can get, children, if she can rely on a responsible official, paid to look after her comfort and convenience.

That's a special feature of our "Personally Conducted" Parties to California.

Join one. It's the best way to travel, especially for women, if comfort, interest, safety and very moderate cost are to be taken into account. The cost of it all is surprisingly low.

If you will write, or drop in at the office, and see me, I will be glad to explain every detail of the famous "Personally Conducted" Parties.

WILLIAMS-NILES MATCH ON TODAY

Play has narrowed down to the finals in the Longwood Bowl singles tournament and leaves R. Norris Williams, 2d, and N. W. Niles to fight it out this afternoon for the honor of meeting Maurice McLoughlin for his right to the singles challenge cup.

Williams, who holds the National singles championship, having defeated McLoughlin last year at Newport, is a slight favorite over Niles, but the latter is playing exceptionally good tennis, and, if at his best, may furnish considerable entertainment for the title-holder.

McLoughlin has secured a little practice with the best players he could find since coming East, and will be ready for the match. It is an important one for him to win. He has two cups in the Longwood bowl and needs a third victory to allow him to retain it permanently. Williams has been going so fast since his defeat at the Panama-Pacific Exposition that many think he is the equal of McLoughlin, his present form considered.

FEDS ARE AFTER FIFTEEN STARS

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 4.—That the Federal League will make a new raid on "organized baseball" was learned when President Gilmore arrived and issued a statement.

According to Gilmore, fifteen star players in the American and National Leagues have been tendered offers that are so big that all will probably be accepted.

RED SOX GAMES ARE POSTPONED

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

The Cleveland club opens a series with a double-header against the Red Sox at Fenway Park tomorrow. First game at 1:30 o'clock. Today's games were postponed on account of rain. All that is left of a once great team is Terry Turner, the "Cotton Top," who in spite of many years' service on the diamond is still a first-class player.

When the Cleveland club was at its best it counted Jean, Bean, Rhoads, Bernhard, Donahue and Moore, pitchers; Bemis, Beulow and Clark, catchers; Stovall, Lajoie, Turner and Bradley, infielders; Flick, Hay, Lush and Vitzon, outfielders.

Of these only Lajoie and Turner are now playing big league baseball. Some of them are dead, some are in the minors, some in the Federals and some have retired.

But the present day Cleveland club has some mighty fingers on its list. There is Joe Jackson, who, year after year, with Cobb of the Tigers and Speaker of the Red Sox, finishes right up or top of the batting list. Then there is Jay Kirke, who can hit the ball a terrific wallop, and Chapman, who is about the best hitting shortstop in the American League.

The team is away down in the race, but it is to be hoped not with. There are one or two first-class pitchers on the payroll—Morton and Mitchell, for example. The club is carrying eight catchers this trip—Nunamaker, Mitchell, Walker, Jones, Harstad, Hagerman, Daniels and Hill.

Manager Pohl also has with him several new players he has gathered from the minors. He is trying them out. They are: Hill, a pitcher from the Southern Michigan Association; Eachen, outfielder from the same body, and Gooch, outfielder, from the Savannah (South Atlantic League) club.

Boston Police Holler for "Cop"

LOWELL, Aug. 4.— Lowell broke Boston's winning streak in the Police League series by registering a 5 to 3 victory. Early in the game the visitors contended that Umpire Condon was tipping the Lowell batters off on the catcher's signals, and a big "pow-wow" resulted.

Immediately after Condon began calling out behind the plate Pitcher Donnelly of Boston struck out the six batters in succession. The score:

	R.	H.	E.
Lowell	3	6	0
Boston	2	6	1

BRAVES FIGHT FOR RUNNER-UP BERTH

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 4.—The Braves and Pirates play the third and final game of their current series at Forbes Field this afternoon.

Whether "Battling Jawn" Evers will be seen in his accustomed position at the keystone sack remains to be seen.

The pugnacious player may be suspended by this time by President Tener for his run-in with Fred Clarke, the Pirate Chief, in the third inning of yesterday's concluding combat, but the only man in town knowing whether or not Mr. Tener has issued any mandates on the fuss to date is Umpire Quigley, and if he has any information concealed about his person it will not be known until game time.

SIDELIGHTS on SPORTS By A·H·C·Mitchell

DUFFY LEWIS will receive a ten-dollar pair of shoes for making the best batting average at Fenway Park yesterday. It is very good betting that Duffy will select a pair of the pounce cafe variety—in three colors. Duffy is somewhat of a Beau Brummel. He doesn't talk much. He doesn't have to. His clothes carry on what conversation Duffy finds necessary.

THE shoes are the gift of a Rockland manufacturer to the player making the best batting average on "Rockland Day" at Fenway Park. Duffy won the hoof-coverers on a sacrifice and a single, he hitting into a double play the other time up. His average is therefore .500 on the day.

Cady and Barry also get shoes (five-dollar ones), for making two baggers.

IF anything goes wrong with Mr. Lannin's ventures (which God forbid), he will at least be able to start a pawn shop with the presents his friends have thrust upon him in the last few days. Loving cups, organization pins, clocks, watches and chains and so on would make a fine showing in the front window.

IT is time Ernest Shore, the tall sycamore of North Carolina, had a bit of luck. As a rule the boys do not hit well behind him. They didn't hit well yesterday, but the team managed to win out. It was Shore's good pitching that did it, though. The three singles made by the Tigers in the opening rounds were quite punky. All told, the Tigers nicked him for seven singles and a two-bagger. Of these Bush made three and Cobb two.

Both of Cobb's hits were hard raps to the box. Shore managed to break the force of them, but in both instances the ball rolled out of everyone's reach.

PERHAPS you have read it in another column—but no harm calling attention to the fact the Braves climbed back in third place last evening. But, better yet, they gained on both the Phillies and Brooklyns.

Third place don't mean much in a race as close as the National League's, but that gain on the leading clubs helps a lot. While the Phillies and Dodgers were kicking their heels in the hotel corridor, being held up by the rain and other causes, the Braves were winning two games from the Pirates. That gave them a full game advantage on their rivals. They are now only half a game behind the Brooklyns and three and a half games behind the Phillies—a mere nothing, eh George?

THE Tigers drew a total paid attendance of 24,876 in the four games played here. They carried away a fat check when they left last night. There were 11,315 (paid) yesterday. This does not include a thousand or so from Rockland, who were the guests of Mr. Lannin.

TY COBB has gone away, not to return until September 15. From a box office standpoint Cobb is the greatest player in the country. He "gets the money." In days gone by Anson was an attraction and Mike Kelly was worth many dollars to the club owners every time he went to bat. Later Honus Wagner drew crowds and so did Lajoie.

But, take it all in all, Cobb has it on any player that ever lived when it comes to drawing money to the box office.

EVERS AND FRED CLARKE IN SCRAP

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 4—Jawn Evers, the scrappy captain and second-sacker of the Boston Braves, and Fred Clarke, the eminent Pirate chief, "mixed" at Forbes Field yesterday afternoon, while the fourth inning of the concluding combat was on.

Evers kicked strenuously at a decision rendered by "Bob" Emslie, the field umpire. He was commanded to beat it and in true Evers fashion took his time in obeying the arbitrator's mandate. En route over to the Braves' coop the Trojan stopped at the Pirates' dugout for a drink.

As Evers was taking his drink, Fred Clarke passed the remark that he "was getting banished purposely." Jawn resented the accusation. Loose lingo in the scheme passed between the two and then Evers let fly a water-soaked sponge at the Pirate chieftain.

No regular, hope-to-die blows were struck. Today Evers said that he was only kidding with Clarke and that the incident had been grossly exaggerated. Clarke also hinted that there was not much to the row. Both diamond nabobs are hoping President Tener will not be heard from in the matter, as their respective clubs are well to the fore in the pennant race and need them in the daily battle.

Evers warmly replied: "You got chased out of games in 1909 and 1910 because you were yellow."

"Who's that?" shrieked back Clarke.

"You heard me," quoth Jawn.

"I got a good mind to," etc., said Fred.

"Come outside," said Jawn. Fred then placed his hand on Jawn's throat and Jawn remarked, "Take it away or I'll" etc.

At this point the police interfered and the matinee was on again.

SOUND BODIES

By JULIAN HAWTHORNE

This is the twenty-eighth of a series of articles on "Round Bodies" written exclusively for the Boston AMERICAN by Julian Hawthorne. These articles will be continued in the AMERICAN on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

CROTCH MUSCLE SERVICEABLE.

That hip-joint is not a ball-and-socket joint, but it can be stiff in other directions than straight up and down; and we must now search out its remaining weaknesses.

To begin with, set your arms akimbo—a posture which I need, probably, no further describe; any group of men, standing around something which arrests their attention, will generally assume it spontaneously. Just rest your hands on your hips, thumbs backward, and you have it exactly.

Now throw your right leg out sideways. If you put a child doing this, he will very likely get it out so far that the leg will make nearly a right angle with the other leg; but you will prefer, at first, to stop the movement a good deal short of that. But the angle of departure will gradually increase, and in due season will reach 80 degrees or beyond. All you have to attend to is to get it out a far as you can without breaking it off.

There is a muscle which runs up the inside of your thigh to the crotch; it is a muscle little considered in the routine avocations of life; but you will find it participating very perceptibly in this movement. It does not enjoy the exercise at first, and after a day or two will expostulate vehemently at its enforced activity; but do not let it prevail upon you to listen to it; keep on approximating to the right angle, and finally the muscle will recover from its surprise, and become not only acquiescent, but ambitious. Ballet dancers indulge this ambition to the limit, and do the "split" as if it were really a comfort to them. I remember a clown, in my youth, who won my admiration by splitting clear down to the floor, and then drawing himself up to the first position again. But it will not be worth your while to go as far as that. Mr. Herbert Spencer, the late eminent philosopher, once engaged in a game of billiards with a young gentleman, at a country house, where they were spending a week-end. Mr. Spencer began, and made two. The young man took his turn, ran out the game without a break. Mr. Spencer put up his cue, and said: "Young man, a reasonable proficiency in a game is commendable; but you betray a proclivity so protranatural as to argue a misspent youth." We have other things to do, even in gymnastics, than to cultivate the split.

Give that crotch muscle its proper chance in the world, but do not make it the chief muscle of your system. It will be of service to you in several ways, and perhaps when you least expect it. And it will help its brethren to do their work. It will perform its part in protecting you against the insidious assaults of the gravitation demon. But unless you contemplate a career of ballet or clowning, do not seek to be preternatural.

The limbering-out of the hip-joint is also important. If you should engage, after the war, in Alpine climbing, a little flexibility in that region may save your life. And Switzerland does not contain all the Alps in this life.

Having made the movement with the right leg, repeat it with the left, and continue for twenty elevations. Keep the chest full and the head erect, and draw in the abdomen. Do the thing right and be content with nothing less than that.

Pere Marquettes Play St. John's

The Pere Marquette council team will be the chief attraction at the Field Day of Ozanum Council, Knights of Columbus, at Russell Field, North Cambridge, on Saturday, when it meets hats with St. John's Catholic club team. A large following of "fans" from South Boston will accompany the Pere Marquette team to Russell Field.

BIKE RACES AGAIN HELD UP BY RAIN

For the fourth time in succession rain today caused the postponement of the bike races scheduled for the Revere Cycle Track tonight. This last cancellment necessitated a complete change in the plans of Manager Nat Butler and the "fans" will benefit thereby.

The next meeting will be held on Saturday night, and on that date there will be two motor-paced races, taking both last Saturday night's and this evening's features into one bill. The regular card of amateur and professional events will be run off also. This is without doubt the greatest card ever offered at the Beach out.

Here is Saturday night's program:

Ten-mile motor-paced match race—Clarence Carman, Jamaica, L. I., vs. Leon Didier, Paris, France.

Twenty-five-mile motor-paced race—Jimmy Moran, Chelsea, vs. Bobby Walthour, Atlanta, Ga., vs. "Pinkie" Turville, Revere, vs. Harold Rolling, Everett.

Amateur and professional events.

The rain checks issued Saturday night will be good for this meet.

Vanitie Wins Race; Resolute Crippled

NEWPORT, Aug. 4.—The New York Y. C. cruising squadron arrived with many of the yachts in a badly crippled condition. The Resolute, one of the America's cup candidates, met with an accident to her top hamper. She was towed into port.

The Vanitie, with a working topsail, was the first of the racing boats to cross the finishing line. When the Vanitie crossed the line only the 80-foot schooner Enchantress was in sight and she was far behind. The Sayonara and the Mayflower of the 50-footers finished in order.

THAT'S THE SECOND GAME IN less than a fortnight Tom Hughes has saved for Ragan. And both times Tom went to Fitz rescue the tying tally was on third with no denizen. ROAD SAYS PIER RATES YIELD NO PROFIT

The Boston & Maine Railroad, in an answer filed in the Supreme Court today, declares that the so-called "old Boston rates" now in effect to and from the Commonwealth Pier in South Boston yield it no income above the cost, and that in many instances the road is compelled to perform the service at less than cost.

The road's answer is in a suit filed against it, the New Haven and the Old Colony roads by the State, seeking the specific performance of an agreement relating to rates to and from the pier and aiming to prevent the roads from changing the terms of the agreement.

HELLEN CONTRACT.

The Boston & Maine declares that the contract was made by Charles S. Mellen when he was president of the Boston & Maine and of the New Haven, and that the Boston & Maine later repudiated the action of Mellen and the directors. The road contends that the contract is not now binding upon it.

Recently Judge Crosby issued a temporary injunction restraining the roads from ending the contract while the State's suit was pending. The Boston & Maine, in its answer today, declares that it has applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission and to the Massachusetts Public Service Commission for authority to increase the rates.

STATE'S POSITION.

That the existing rates are not in the public interest and that the traffic is in a healthy foreign commerce are contentions of the road.

Relying on the contract with the roads, the State expended $2,480,000 on the Commonwealth Pier and entered into contracts with two steamship companies. The State alleges in its bill that if the railroads break their contracts the State will be forced to violate its contracts with the steamship companies.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were below for their high for the day early in the last hour, but the majority showed gains. Bethlehem Steel was up 21 at 289, the highest it has ever sold for. U. S. Steel sold at 70, up 2, half an hour from the close. War order issues were the strongest class.

Among gains in New York were Chino ½, Anaconda ⅝, Utah 1¼, Inspiration ⅝, American Smelting Pfd., American locomotive ½, American Car & Foundry 3¾, till being rumored that it has a munitions contract for $75,000,000, Crucible 1¾, General Electric 1½, Mexican Petroleum 1¾, Studebaker ⅞, Westinghouse ⅜, Best Sugar 1¾, Pressed Steel 1½, International Harvester ½, Rock Island ⅝, Northern Pacific ¼ and Atchison ⅜.

Declines included American Can ⅞, Baldwin ½, St. Paul 1¼, Union Pacific ⅜, Southern Pacific ¼, Lehigh Valley ⅜, Canadian Pacific ½ and Baltimore & Ohio ¼. Among issues to sell at new highs were Car and Foundry, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem and Beet Sugar.

Gains in Boston included Elevated 3, Boston & Maine 2, Calumet & Arizona ½, Copper Range ⅝, Greene-Cananea 1, North Butte ¼, U. S. Smelting ⅛ and Tamarack ¾. Among losses were Alaska Gold ⅛, Butte & American Zinc 50c, Mohawk 1½, Shannon 1½, Wolverine ⅝, Quincy 1, United Fruit 1¼ and New Haven ½.

WAR STOCKS THE LEADERS.

Stocks opened strong, and there was no change in the situation over night, sentiment remaining bullish. Large gains included many for railway shares. There was not much business in New York in coppers. Most of the trading there was in war order issues. They also made the largest advances. Bethlehem sold at a new highest price within a few minutes. Regarding war order issues in New York, a New York special brokerage house says: "There has been some discrimination by the banks in regard to these issues, which instead of being an element of weakness, makes for stability in the speculative situation. Railroad stocks are being accumulated on all weak days, and not sold, as a great many believe. The same is true of copper stocks, and as soon as a few increased dividends are announced, the public will begin to realize it." Bethlehem jumped 15 points in two transactions. There was a good demand from the West for some of the rails. U. S. Steel sold at its highest price in many months. The big market was strong all the morning with the swing of 50 volume. While irregularity developed in the railway list the war orders issues remained on a higher level. There seems to be more speculative spirit every day.

LITTLE CHANGE IN BOSTON.

There was little change in the market situation in Boston. Business was not on a large scale and irregularity prevailed most of the time. Zincs were rather weak and there was small demand for local copper shares. It is admitted by producers that the metal price is not above 15½ cents a pound, but that large sales above 15 can be made for a while is questioned. Spot copper was up 19s. 9d. in London, while futures advanced £1 2s. 6d. and electrolytic was unchanged. Lead and spelter were unchanged, too. There is increased inquiry for spelter, it is claimed.

Deny Settlement in Eaton Divorce

The reported settlement in the divorce suit brought by Charles E. Eaton, owner of Thompson's Spa, against his wife, Mrs. Finney Bartlett Eaton, has been denied at the office of Sherman L. Whipple, attorney for Mr. Eaton.

The case was postponed because Mr. Whipple's illness, under a general continuance, so that what it will be tried as soon as a judge is available.

The case may come up for a hearing in September, but probably not before October.

HEAR OFFICIALS OF REVERE ON JUNK CASE

To investigate the statement of Revere junk dealers that they had been solicited for money for influencing Mayor Arthur B. Curtis, Chief of Police Charles T. Bradbury, City Solicitor Andrew A. Cassasa and Councilmen Jacob Mendoza of the Beach district and William W. Gordon of the Centre, with several junk dealers and other witnesses, appeared before Acting District Attorney Lavelle today, and after hearing the testimony he announced that the case would be presened to the Grand Jury Friday.

Following the hearing in the district attorney's office Mayor Curtis said the case did not involve any member of the city government, but was a question between the junk men and a third party, who had been summoned to appear and had been heard by Mr. Lavelle.

Chief Bradbury and Solicitor Cassasa remained with Mayor Curtis during the questioning by the district attorney.

TELLS OF OFFER.

Councilman Gordon said he told the district attorney of having been approached by a man who offered him money, but refused to accept it and ordered the man from his home.

Three junk men appearing today were Barnet Ross, Herman Price and Morris Goldstein. Jacob Bromberg, a prominent resident of the town, was also heard, and was ordered to appear before the investigating body Friday.

Before the proceedings started Mayor Curtis told the story of how he came to bring the matter to the attention of the district attorney. Mayor Curtis said:

"Sometime ago five men made application for junk licenses for which the fee is $50. They were Morris Goldstein, Henry Price, Barnet Ross, Benjamin Rosenthal and Isaac Weinstein. The licenses of Ross and Olipski were granted and they paid the fee.

"Later the city collector brought to my attention the fact that the other three had not paid their license fees. I asked the police to get after them, and to the astonishment of everyone, Goldstein, Price and Weinstein said they had paid their fees and should be allowed to do business. They then made affidavits concerning the payments and to whom they were made. Those three affidavits I have in my possession.

TELLS OF PAYMENT.

"Weinstein says he paid a man $50 and Goldstein $25. They say they paid a certain man $75 each for the privilege of doing business. I told them the city must receive its fee before they could continue to collect junk, but when one man said he had threatened to avoid putting hardship on poor men I agreed to $20 down to the city collector and so much a week until the whole fee of $50. One is now all paid up and the other two nearly so."

GLAZIERS WANTED

A strike of men employed as glaziers (setters of glass) by concerns engaged in the Plate Glass and Sash industry in Boston and vicinity, has been called, and many men have summarily left their employment.

The purpose of the strike appears to be to compel employers to conform to certain rules formulated entirely by unions, covering, besides questions of wages and hours of labor, such matters as overtime, travelling expenses, the abolishment of piece-work, limitation of apprentices, etc., etc.

The unions have refused to submit these demands to arbitration or to meet the employers to consider the same.

The only course remaining, therefore, is to seek to fill the places vacated.

The employers desire to have only first class men and to such men, whether previously employed by them or not, opportunity is offered to apply either to the employers direct or to the office of The Masters' & Craftsmen's Societies, at Room 50, in the Master Builders' Building, No. 166 Devonshire st., Boston.

Only such men as are willing to work under Open Shop conditions are desired, and to such men the best wages will be paid in accordance with their ability.

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE;
OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

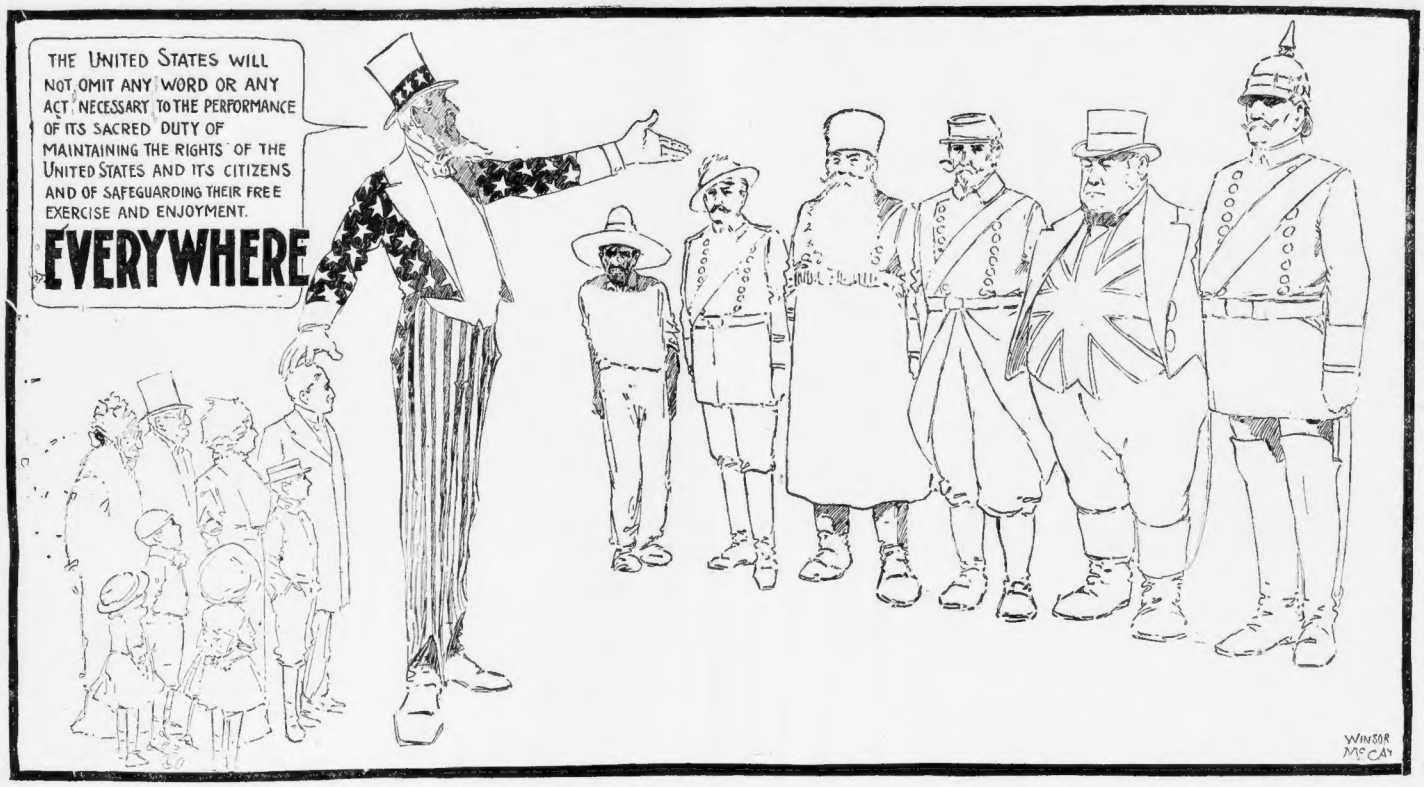
WHY "OMIT ANY WORD OR ACT" TO SAFEGUARD AMERICANS IN MEXICO?



THE UNITED STATES WILL NOT OMIT ANY WORD OR ANY ACT NECESSARY TO THE PERFORMANCE OF ITS SACRED DUTY OF MAINTAINING THE RIGHTS OF THE UNITED STATES AND ITS CITIZENS AND OF SAFEGUARDING THEIR FREE EXERCISE AND ENJOYMENT.
EVERYWHERE
WINSOR McCAY

IN the concluding paragraph of the note to Germany, dated May 13, Mr. Wilson very accurately and very properly defined the highest duty of a government.

That paragraph reads:

"The Imperial German government will not expect the government of the United States to omit any word or ANY ACT necessary to the performance of its SACRED DUTY of maintaining the rights of the United States AND ITS CITIZENS and of safeguarding their free exercise and enjoyment."

Well said!

A most admirable exposition of the duty and obligation of a free government towards its own citizens and TOWARD ALL other nations of the world.

We say ALL other nations with emphasis of capitals because of the peculiar and inexplicable fact that Mr. Wilson's policies indicate that he thinks this just, wholesome, righteous and universal doctrine applies only to SOME other nation.

For example, the rights of the United States and of its citizens have NOT been maintained in Mexico.

The free exercise and enjoyment of the rights of the United States have NOT been safeguarded in Mexico.

The words and acts necessary to the performance of the sacred duty of maintaining the rights of the United States and its citizens and of safeguarding their free exercise and enjoyment in Mexico HAVE BEEN OMITTED.

Otherwise the continuous and consecutive robberies, outrages and murders of American men and women resident in Mexico would not persist.

The United States CAN make Mexican belligerents cease robbing, outraging and murdering American men and women.

The United States has the power and the resources to compel ten Mexicos, if there were that many of that wretched country, to cease insulting American sovereignty and robbing, outraging and murdering American citizens.

Mexicans have not ceased either their insults to our nation or their crimes against our citizens.

The compulsion we could apply, and ought long since to have applied, has not been applied. The words and acts necessary to make American lives and American property safe in Mexico have not been performed or spoken.

They have been persistently omitted.

We have watchfully waited while crime follows crime, without a word of remonstrance which these robbers and murderers heeded at all and without an act which would make these robbers and murderers pay heed to our words.

A civilized belligerent nation across the sea engaged in desperate conflict with a powerful alliance of other civilized nations, sinks one of the ships of its enemy, carrying enemy soldiers and enemy ammunition and in doing so causes the deaths of Americans voyaging on that enemy ship through waters formally declared to be a war zone.

Our government, without loss of time and in great indignation, remonstrates in high terms and makes its willingness to use force to prevent a repetition of the incident clearly apparent.

Mr. Wilson omits no word and declares his instant readiness to perform any act which will safeguard American lives and American property against German attack.

And at that very instant, and long before and ever since, American citizens were being cruelly slain and abominably outraged in Mexico, for no other reason than that they were Americans and that the men had property and the women honor which these rapacious and lustful villains coveted.

And neither at that time, nor at any time before nor at any time since, has Mr. Wilson ceased to omit the words and the acts necessary to safeguard those American men and women in the possession of their property, their lives and their dear honor.

Upon what principle, unknown to plain men, Mr. Wilson thus proceeds one way in one case involving American lives and rights, and a diametrically opposite way in another case involving American lives and rights, we are unable to say or even to guess.

Why a German belligerent may not even attack an enemy ship, carrying men and ammunition meant to destroy German lives, if that attack imperils American citizens, and why a Mexican belligerent can shoot, stab, hang and mutilate American citizens and rob American men of their property and American women of their honor, without effective rebuke and without the faintest show of force to protect them, is a question which we cannot answer and which we refuse even to attempt to answer.

But we do know that Mr. Wilson should answer it.

We do know that these contradictory actions and conflicting policies are responsible for a condition that is monstrous, shameful, hateful.

We do know that the American people will not much longer remain voiceless and idle while their brother Americans and sister Americans are thus made the victims of savage cruelty and abominable bestiality.

The American people are not content that Germans or Britons shall imperil the lives or destroy the property of American citizens.

And they are as little content with the vacillating, watchful waiting policy which has permitted for months and which continues to permit Mexican brigands to rob and murder and shame American men and women undisturbed by any effective word or act of the American government.

Citizens, are not those your sentiments?

Is it not time that this national humiliation and disgrace ended?

And do you not all feel that no word or act should be omitted which is necessary to the performance of the sacred duty of safeguarding the American citizens who are yet alive in Mexico and of punishing the dastard villains who have so foully slain our dead?
